Wages Raised for 1,000,000.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

BEGINNING yesterday, approximately one million workers in this country had their salaries increased, and, to a great extent, restored to the 1929 pay level. The pay increases applied to 700,000 textile workers.

This army of 1,000,000 with the old buying powers restored, and with the other millions to follow, accompanied by a more plentiful distribution of dollars, will, under wise management, settle the depression problem. Trading the gold standard for good times is a good trade.

IT IS sad news about the two courageous Lithuanians, Capt. Darius and Lieut. Girenas, who, to honor their country, undertook a flight from New York to Kaunos, capital of Lithuania.

Their bodies were found yesterday morning in a forest near the Pomeranean village of Soldin, 100 miles north of Berlin.

They had successfully crossed the ocean, but lost their direction in bad weather. Their gasoline gave out, they crashed at terrific speed in a dense forest, and were killed instantly.

They left the United States without license or permission to depart. They need no such permission for the long flight that they have now begun.

WILEY POST, still flying, is beating his own record. As the bodies of the two brave Lithuanians were found at 7 yesterday morning, crushed in the thick forest, Post was about taking off from Koenigsberg, East Prussia, on the way to Moscow or beyond.

THINGS HAPPEN in Germany that once happened only in comic opera, or farce. A German newspaper, Deutsche Zeitung, is suppressed, its editor imprisoned, because that newspaper printed a statement, taken from a Jewish newspaper published in Vienna, to the effect that the great Italian flier, Balbo, is of Jewish descent.

The German government said this was "calculated to stir up ill feeling between Germany and Italy," so the paper was suppressed, the editor jailed.

What would Mr. Hitler do if a German editor should print an article alleging that the founder of Christianity was the son of a Jewess?

ONE REALLY great Italian traveler was by descent a Spanish Jew, namely, Christopher Columbus. His Jewish uncles are said to have done more than Queen Isabella to finance him.

The Semitic race have long been pioneers in travel. From the east end of the Mediterranean the Phoenicians were the first to go out past the Rock of Gibraltar, explore the Atlantic and open up the British tin mines. They were first to sail out of sight of land, having no compass, navigating by the stars.

GEN. BALBO, leader of the Italian flying fleet, decides that the southern route is safer than the northern, by which he came. Delays in Iceland present the main obstacle on the northern journey. When real flying comes, as it will soon, routes will make no difference.

As Capt. Hawks predicts, planes bound on long journeys will rise in the air five or six miles, beyond the reach of storms, fogs, clouds and high winds and make a bee line to their destination.

As the bottom of the ocean is always calm, so the top of our atmosphere is always calm, with a gentle wind blowing always toward the east, caused by the eastward motion of the planet.

FIVE AMERICANS, arrested in Spain for an alleged fight with the civil guard, are amazed because such a fuss is made about it:

"Why, in New York that would be just a night court matter."

Many Americans would be surprised to know the respect with which law and its representatives are treated in Europe. There crime is taken seriously and the kidnaping or "snatching" industry doesn't even exist. Europe believes that the public should set the example of respect for law.

IT IS reported from Tokio that Japanese newspapers are disturbed by United States plans for building up the Navy.

The newspaper "Hochi" says:

"If Americans fear aggression by Japan, they are mistaken, because America's aerial superiority is so great that a country with an inferior fleet like Japan could not venture across the Pacific."

This country can and does assert that there is no more idea here of aggression against Japan than of an attack on the planets Mars, Jupiter or Venus.

We do not WANT any war, do not EXPECT any, do not intend to HAVE any, and for that reason we want adequate defense.

So far as possibility of attack by the United States is concerned, Japan wastes every dollar she puts into new warships. At the same time we know that is none of our business.

THERE WAS an earthquake yesterday at Poona, in India.

IRKUTSK, Siberia, July 18.—(AP.)—Wiley Post, American round-the-world flier, landed here at 3:35 p. m., Moscow time, today (8:35 a. m., Pittsburgh time.)

He planned to take off again at 11 o'clock this evening (4 p. m., Pittsburgh time.)

Post's arrival in Irkutsk put him 16 hours and 34 minutes ahead of the time made by Harold Gatty and himself in their round-the-world trip. Together they reached Irkutsk 91 hours 59 minutes out of New York. His arrival was 75 hours 25 minutes out of New York.

MOSCOW, July 18.—(AP.)—Wiley Post, continuing on his solo flight around the world, passed over Krasnoyarsk at 11:50 a. m. today, Moscow time (4:30 a. m. Pittsburgh time).

The American airman was en route from Novisibirsk to Irkutsk in Eastern Siberia. At Krasnoyarsk he had completed almost one-half of this 890-mile leg of his flight.

NOVOSIBIRSK, Siberia, July 18.—(AP.)—Well ahead of the time he made for a similar distance in 1931, Wiley Post streaked for Irkutsk, Siberia, today, just 2 hours and 35 minutes after finishing an 1,818-mile flight from Moscow.

The doughty American around-the-world flier swooped down on the Novosbirsk field at 6:27 a. m. (11:27 p. m. Monday, Pittsburgh time), and then, tired almost to the point of exhaustion, took off

DR. WOODFIN TO QUIT 3RD U.P. PULPIT

Resignation Brings End of Troubles With Congregation

The troubles of the Rev. Dr. William M. Woodfin with members of his fashionable church are ended; the doctor is resigning.

The plans of the pastor of the Third United Presbyterian Church were revealed today in a letter sent to every member. The members were warned not to argue the resignation.

Dr. Woodfin, so ardent a dry that he became a volunteer prohibition agent some years ago, took to his pulpit 10 weeks ago to reply to the elders of the church with whom he was quarreling.

AFTERNOON TEAS

He said he was criticized at secret meetings because of his $8,500 salary and afternoon teas held in the homes of various members of the congregation.

His congregation, by a vote of 276 to 86, gave him a vote of confidence, but two weeks later the Monongahela Presbytery appointed a commission of seven to investigate the church's affairs.

This investigation appeared ended with the announcement by Dr. Woodfin, on May 25, that a harmonious settlement had been reached.

CLIMAX REACHED

But the real climax of the trouble came with a notice sent out by the commission and signed by the Rev. Dr. A. Gordon MacLennan, moderator of the church. The notice:

"In view of the fact that Dr. William M. Woodfin has expressed to the commission his intention of severing his relation as pastor of the Third Church at as early a time as possible, the commission hereby directs the members, officers and pastor to refrain absolutely from any and all matters and courses of a divisive or controversial nature.

"Should this mandate of the commission be violated by any member or officer, we hereby serve notice of our right to direct the session to issue a certificate for such member or officer to some other church of their choice."

Dr. Woodfin has been pastor of the Squirrel Hill Church for nine years.

Oust the Politicians And Save the Schools!

THE ADDRESS of Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, before the National Education Association at its convention in Chicago, should halt the dangerous movement on the part of our state and local governments to starve the schools in order to feed the politicians.

"Economic recovery will prove a barren achievement," said President Frank, "unless the minds of the children of the nation are safeguarded during the crisis."

He uttered a grave warning of the perils of economies in the school system which are not dictated by a just sense of values.

"It is to education alone," said he, "that the nation can look to produce a leadership for the future."

THIS TIMELY warning was echoed by Gov. McNutt, of Indiana, who also addressed the great meeting.

"The most precious thing in the state," said Gov. McNutt, "is the child; whether it be your child or mine, or the child of the hovel in the city or the hut in the backwoods of the hills. The birthright of that child is equality of opportunity.

"Public education," he continued, "is a necessity and one of the ideals of our government. Without it we turn our backs on the painfully accumulated wisdom of the ages and start back on the road to barbarism."

It is such utterances that truly reflect the feelings and the convictions of the American people.

If the ordinary politician, who is as indifferent to his duty as he is greedy for his pay, has a scintilla or sense or an ounce of shame, he will bow to this rising protest throughout the country against the attempt to curtail the educational opportunities and facilities of the nation's children.

ECONOMY in public expenditure is demanded by the conditions of the times, but the impulse to economize should be directed and exercised where it belongs—in the vast field of political waste and indefensible extravagance.

Here is where the knife of retrenchment should cut deep and wide.

The faithful school teachers of the country are not to be bracketed as a public expense with the thousands of political parasites who feed at the public trough and, protected by the party machines, defy all efforts to displace them or reduce their number.

The schools are a sacred trust and the people of the United States so regard them.

The politicians are a national pest.

The people have no intention of preserving them as payroll fixtures at the expense of the country's school children.

A. F. of L. Head Sees 'Open Shop' Threat

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—Secretary Perkins today estimated that more than 500,000 persons found employment in the United States during June.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today he planned to demand investigation of any discharges of employes under the shorter work week in industry.

Green said a number of instances had been called to his attention where workers had lost jobs with application of a shorter week. He told newspaperman this was the opposite intention of industrial codes, which are intended to spread employment.

LABOR OPPPOSITION

At the same time labor advisors of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, industrial recovery czar, showed solidified opposition to the company union provisions of the steel industry's code, which is to be taken up in hearings possibly within a week with indications pointing strongly to their ultimate rejection.

Johnson said he has approved nothing in advance of hearings on the steel code, but the labor men regard the company union plan as definitely nullifying the provision of the industrial control law giving employes the right to unionize any way they wish without interference from mill managements.

Green has criticized the labor provisions proposed by the steel industry for containing open shop language. Somewhat similar language has been approved tentatively by coal operators.

GREEN FOR PROBE

Referring to the reported discharge of employes, Green declared:

"I will insist upon investigations of such cases coming to my attention."

NEWSIE FIGHT JAILS YOUTH

George Bailey, 21, of 420 East Lacock street, chose five days in jail, instead of a $10 fine, when arraigned in Central Police Court today in connection with a newsboys' disturbance. Bailey, who said he was a member of the Unemployed Council, a radical organization, said he had been trying to organize newsboys.

The fight was one of several growing out of the refusal of about 200 newsboys to continue selling the three Pittsburgh papers.

About 20 per cent of the street sellers—North Side and East End—have been paying $2 per 100 papers wholesale, although 80 per cent paid $2.25. Recently rates were equalized at $2.25. Loss of the preferential rate precipitated the refusal of the North Side and East End sellers to continue, and gave opportunity for trouble making.

Only these street sellers are affected, but outsiders, including the Unemployed Council, have driven from their corners boys trying to sell papers and otherwise creating disturbance.

Regis Butler, 18, of 4905 Rosetta street, is in West Penn Hospital with knife wounds received when seven young men attacked him at Penn avenue and Winebiddle street for selling papers, police report.

A half-dozen or more individuals have been locked up for various disturbances.

Eight Injured In East Liberty Trolley Crash

Eight persons were injured, one apparently seriously, in a rear-end collision of street cars at noon today at Penn and Highland avenues.

Mrs. Dorothy Swiss, 37, of 5524 Stanton avenue, was knocked unconscious, according to the police, when a man leaped from one of the cars upon a loading platform on which she was standing. Her daughter, Isabel, 13, was injured slightly.

Mrs. Swiss was detained at Pittsburgh Hospital, but her daughter and all the others taken to the hospital were sent home. One man left without waiting for treatment. The others injured included Mrs. Esther Caplan, 58, of 334 Ophelia street; Joseph Hoffman, 66, of 1846 Center avenue; Dorothy Aiello, 29, and Leo Hobbart, 20, both of 1132 Paulson avenue.

An inbound 96 car had halted in Penn avenue when an 82 car plowed into it from the rear. A Gronhardt, operator of the latter, said the control stuck and he was unable to shut off the power, according to the police report.

HUNT HARRIMAN IN 3 STATES

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—Joseph W. Harriman's fumbling search for death put police of three states on their guard today.

Thwarted in two attempts to leap into the Hudson River, the banker who vanished yesterday for the second time was sought today in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Capt. John W. Johnston, railroad police official at Jersey City, said last night that Harriman, soon after he walked out of a Manhattan nursing home, made two attempts to jump from ferry boats into the river.

The banker, who is 68 years old, made six ferry trips across the river between Manhattan and Jersey City, Johnston said.
Jersey City, Johnson said.

An inquiry is in progress in federal court into the sanity of the banker, who once before—two months ago—ran away from the nursing home and when he was found in a Roslyn, Long Island, inn stabbed himself over the heart.

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey today ordered forfeited the $25,000 bail under which Harriman had been at liberty pending trial.

Harriman Son Home Robbed, Suspect Held

RIDGEFIELD, N. J., July 18.—(INS.)—Police today held William Ruth, 41, charged with robbing the Glen Head (L. I.) home of Allan Harriman, son of the missing banker, on Thursday. Some of the stolen property was recovered at Ruth's home, police claimed.

DEMPSEY WEDS HANNAH

ELKO, Nev., July 18.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, and Miss Hannah Williams, Broadway musical comedy star, were married here at 9:30 a. m. today.

After the ceremony they left by automobile for Reno, where in 1931 Dempsey was divorced from Estelle Taylor, movie actress. Miss Williams divorced Roger Wolfe Kahn, son of Otto Kahn, the banker, in Reno a few months ago.

HOLLYWOOD, July 18.—(INS.)—Estelle Taylor, beautiful dark-eyed actress, ex-wife of Jack Dempsey, today extended her wishes to Dempsey and Miss Hannah Williams for "complete happiness."

Miss Taylor said:

"Despite our divorce, I am unable to shake off the feeling that I am tied to Jack by some indefinable bond."

She added:

"I have no intention of marrying again."

Repeal Faces Real Test As South Goes to Polls

First Returns from Arkansas 44 to 1 For Wets

International News Service.

Possibly holding the fate of national prohibition repeal in their hands, voters of Alabama and Arkansas went to the polls today to register their verdicts on the proposed Twenty-first Amendment to the Constitution.

The first precinct to report in Arkansas' special statewide election returned a 44 to 1 majority for the wets. Forty-five persons, representing all of the eligible voters in Upper Hill township had been to the polls by 10:30 this morning.

Alabamans braved downpours to jam the polls. Interest was at fever heat and voting during the first hours indicated the largest ballot cast on any question outside of the general election.

Crucial test in the drive for prohibition repeal, Alabama, one of the dryest of the prohibition states, was expected to register a close vote on the issue, with the outcome touch and go. Wets and drys alike claimed certain victory.

Tennessee goes to the polls on the issue Thursday, but observers predict the repealists will have a far less difficult fight in the volunteer state than in Alabama and Arkansas.

"Wets" are confident that the appeals of President Roosevelt and Postmaster General James A. Farley have aided their cause immeasurably.

CRUSADE TO ABOLISH COMPANY MINE TOWNS BEGINS HERE

BAN PROPOSED IN CODE FOR INDUSTRY

Pretty Social Worker Canvasses Pits; Turner Quits

A crusade against coal company mining towns was opened today by the Pennsylvania Security League with these developments:

A movement was afoot to have the federal government abolish the company town through the coal code to be set up by the industry.

A Philadelphia woman social worker arrived to spread the "low down" among the miners on what happened to measures in the Legislature designed to benefit them.

Dr. Ralph E. Turner, of the history department at the University of Pittsburgh, resigned as chairman of the Security League. It was learned Pitt authorities looked askance at his connection with the league.

A little woman with a big idea, but manifestly frightened, prepared to visit the mining towns to distribute "Black News" among the miners.

ACTIVITY FROWNED ON

The publication, issued by the Security League, the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, the labor standards committee and the co-operative legislative board of the transportation brotherhoods of Pennsylvania, heralds:

"The betrayal of the unemployed, the workers, the aged poor, the injured, the working women and children, and the taxpayers — by the legislators and their controllers."

The young woman is Elizabeth Wight, pretty vocational guidance instructor in Philadelphia. She will start her tour of the company towns tomorrow with an armful of Black News.

She thought she might meet with interference, but hoped not, she said.

Mr. Turner said he resigned because the league activities took too much of his time. He said:

"By no means, by inference or by implication, did the university give me an alternative of going on or quitting. The proof is that I was reappointed before I wrote a letter of resignation."

TO TOUR TOWNS

It was learned, however, that the university frowned on his connection with the organization and inquiry had been made as to whether he intended to pursue a career in public life or continue his academic work.

Miss Wight said the league hopes to have the company town abolished under the coal code to be approved by the federal government. Stephen Raushenbush, of the State Labor Department and secretary of the Security League, described the company town as an evil and the miners as victims of a vicious peonage system.

Postoffice Workers Make Pay March

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—About 400 members of the National Substitute Postoffice Employes Association called on Postmaster Kiely today to present a petition asking a minimum wage of $1,000 a year.

They then collected in Madison Square and marched downtown to City Hall to voice their grievances there.

STORES OPPOSE 40-HOUR WEEK

A number of Pittsburgh's retail food stores have taken a stand against a 40-hour week and $14 minimum weekly wage mentioned in reports from Washington as the possible objective of the administration in a code for food retailers.

Among the firms opposed to such action are the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company, the P. H. Butler stores and McCann & Co.

According to H. V. McNamara, of the Kroger Company, such a move would "cause dissatisfaction among employes, interfere with century-old habits of buyers and require the entire revamping of many operations."

The opposition developed here after reports were received that the wage and hour proposal would be made by President Roosevelt today. This report came from Albert H. Morrill, president of the Kroger Company.

Similar protests have been made by James S. Huey, vice president of the P. H. Butler Stores and C. M. Kefover, president of McCann & Co.

BOOST IN BREAD PRICE FOUGHT

Plans to enlarge their war on the increased cost of bread will be made at a meeting of the Consumers Protective Association, composed of 32 Jewish groups, in the Irene Kaufmann Settlement tonight. The meeting was arranged after a committee yesterday conferred with Mayor John S. Herron.

Mayor Herron was told that the Jewish Bakers Association raised the price of rye bread from 12 to 15 cents June 3, but that following a boycott by consumers the price was restored to 12 cents. The bakers then reduced the size of the two-pound loaves to 1 pound and 12 ounces, the Mayor was told.

P. O. PAY RATES HERE FIXED

Rates of wages for plasterers, steamfitters and laborers working on the new postoffice have been definitely fixed, according to an announcement today by the Department of Labor in Washington.

Information that L. W. Robert, Jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of public buildings, has signed the order is expected here momentarily, when the word will be given for the men to return to work by union labor officials.

It will be mandatory for the contractor to pay the wage scale fixed by the government, according to Department of Labor officials.

The dispute between carpenters, iron workers and other unions over jurisdiction in certain classes of work on the building remains to be arbitrated, according to Labor Department officials.

LABOR BATTLES 'CODE UNION'

Labor chief also said a number of complaints were being received that employers were favoring non-union as opposed to union labor and that where discharges were taking place the union men were going. He said this situation also should be aired thoroughly before a code is granted any industry.

Meanwhile, the Recovery Administration put new force into the drive for more agreements by industries to raise wages and cut working hours immediately without waiting for government action on their "codes of fair competition."

CODES PUSHED

Various groups on the verge of submitting these codes, the formal agreements for self-government of industry under federal supervision, were being pushed to act quickly.

Johnson and his aides were seeking preliminary wage-raising agreements in retail lines particularly, so as to get some of the immediate benefits of the recovery movement to store and office workers as well as factory employes.

A general call to all business and industry to join the movement also was being worked on, but before being acted upon it was to be discussed fully at the President's recovery council, the group of directors for the government's new emergency organization which meets at the White House in place of the regular cabinet.

Virtually completed were plans to thrown behind such a general call a campaign to stir public opinion by Liberty Loan drive methods. The result said to be hoped for is that people would do their trading with firms joining in the recovery movement.

STEEL INDUSTRY UNIONIZATION DRIVE OPENS

Association Here in Nation-Wide Campaign

A nation-wide drive to unionize the steel industry, which for years has held fast to an "open shop" labor policy, has been launched from Pittsburgh by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, according to Louis Leonard, international secretary-treasurer.

The association, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is fighting the new "company unions" recently installed by various steel companies in anticipation of the provisions of the steel code under the National Industrial Recovery Act. It intends to demand that a more liberal labor policy be included in the steel code.

LEONARD'S STAND

Leonard said:

"We have a code 58 years old embodied in agreements drawn and signed with many independent steel concerns following our convention in the Roosevelt Hotel last April. That is the code we will submit to the National Recovery Administrator.

"We are ready to insist that this one-year agreement, which became effective with the independents July 1, 1933, be made the basis of a code to govern the entire steel industry."

The Amalgamated has concentrated its campaign upon the United States Steel Corporation and some of the larger independents. Michael F. Tighe, of Pittsburgh, international president of the Amalgamated, was in St. Louis yesterday to complete final plans for the unionization of the Granite City Steel Company there.

UNION FORMED

Leonard returned from Gary, Ind., yesterday and announced the formation of a large union in the United States Steel Corporation plant in that city. He also asserted that similar work had been carried on in the Calumet district near Chicago and at the Indiana Harbor (Ind.) works of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company.

The recent activity has made it impossible to tabulate total enrollments, Leonard declared. He said:

"We have made tremendous progress lately and the true figures are not immediately available. With Tighe and others on the road so much of the time lately, and with locals springing up so rapidly, statistics will just have to wait. Another reason is that, owing to the depression, many of our locals have been idle for periods ranging from three months to three years, and so have delayed sending in their reports."

The Amalgamated officials are to join other labor leaders in Washington next week at the steel code hearings to present a united fight on certain objectionable features of the code outlined by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

POWERS REACH WHEAT PACT

LONDON, July 18.—(AP.)—Representatives of four of the largest wheat-producing nations in the world reached an agreement today with Danubian producers whereby exports of the latter nations will be held to 54,000,000 bushels this year and 56,000,000 bushels next year.

The accord is held to be of the highest importance since it represents the keystone of provisions set up by Australian delegates to participation in an acreage restriction scheme, which American representatives consider necessary to use up the large existing surplus in order to raise prices.

Boy Missing for Year Found in Foster Home Under Assumed Name

Sun-Telegraph Story Leads to Recovery Of Lost Lad

They found the Forgotten Boy today—an imaginative lad who disappeared from his home and parents a year ago and since has been posing as an orphan in a Juvenile Court home.

For 12 months Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Davis, of Homestead, have been worrying and wondering what became of 12-year-old George.

And all that time young George has been living as a ward of Juvenile Court in the home of Mrs. Josephine Bennak at 813 Long street, Millvale. He had adopted another name.

George convinced any number of persons, including the attaches of Juvenile Court, that his father, who is quite healthy, had ended his life and that his mother was dead.

STORY BRINGS DISCOVERY

A story in the Sun-Telegraph led to George's discovery.

It was a year ago yesterday that George walked out of his home at 333 West Fifteenth street, Homestead. His father said he had been "promised" a spanking.

The boy sought out Justice of the Peace John B. Jones and Constable Frank Bell, of Homestead, and told them of his parents' death.

They turned him over to Juvenile Court, and George was dispatched for a few days to the Detention Home, then to Mrs. Bennak's.

BOY DENIES IDENTITY

The father actually talked with his son over the 'phone a few days after the disappearance. Davis, hearing of the boy who had talked with the 'squire, called the Detention Home. When George was put on the 'phone, his father asked him whether he was George Davis. And the father said his son replied:

"No, I'm William Barner."

Last week in the Sun-Telegraph the father offered $100 for information leading to the boy's recovery.

Constable Bell then recognized the boy's picture in the paper.

So father and son were reunited in the Bennak home. Davis wept, his son hung his head.

The boy probably will be returned to his parents in a few days.

GEORGE DAVIS, 12

HOME CLOSED TO WARDS

Judge Benjamin Lencher closed another home to Juvenile Court wards yesterday, and ordered repairs on several houses to protect children.

Continuing the parade of wards, caretakers and parents which he started two weeks ago, Judge Lencher heard from the children for whom he ordered changes that they had been underfed and forced to do hard work.

Investigators reported that a fence, ordered to protect wards in another home against a possible 80-foot fall, had been built.

Judge Lencher, faced with many reports of improper diet given county wards, ordered women workers in the probation department to draw up standard menus to meet both the varied tastes of children, and their nutritive requirements.

He also, upon receipt of a report from Joseph Tufts, of the Pittsburgh Housing Association, plans to set a standard for housing the wards.

Princes' Oil Wells Face Foreclosure

The princes were removed as officers on actions instituted by their wives, Mary McCormic, opera singer, and Mae Murray, film actress.

M'QUAIDE BANS JAIL FOR BABIES

No more will the child of an accused parent have to spend time in a city jail as in the case of Mrs. Edna Mills and her 14-month-old daughter who were locked up in the North Side Police Station last week as the aftermath of domestic disturbances.

Police Supt. Franklin T. McQuaide today issued orders to use patrolmen to use discretion particularly in the case of mothers with babies. If the case is a minor one, the superintendent ordered, the mother is to be released on her own recognizance. If she is involved in a major crime the child is to be turned over to Juvenile Court authorities.

Supt. McQuaide conferred today with A. L. Wills, superintendent of the Juvenile Court Detention Home. It was agreed that the home would care for all children under 16 years of age in cases where there were no parents to look after them.

DOCTOR HEEDED BY ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today heeded words of caution from his physician and remained in his rooms at the White House to assure no ill effects from a cold which set in after his week-end cruise down the Potomac River.

Although much improved, the Chief Executive followed the advice of Dr. Ross I. McIntyre of the Naval Hospital and remained away from his office. Dr. McIntyre, after visiting the President, declared him to be "all right," but that another day of rest would be beneficial.

Marvin H. McIntyre, one of the President's secretaries, said the Chief Executive was running no temperature, nor suffering pain, but thought it best to rest.

Roosevelt Son Flies Channel to London

LONDON, July 18.—(AP.)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., arrived at Croydon by air from Paris today. He said he probably would stay in England about 10 days, spending most of his time in London. Later he intends to visit Spain.

FIXED EVIDENCE IN SWEATSHOP QUIZ TOLD

Mrs. Pinchot Offers Repudiation of Girls' Denials

HARRISBURG, July 18.—(AP.)—Charges that the agitation against sweatshops is based on "officially solicited and 'fixed' evidence" were made by representatives of manufacturers today as the Legislative Committee resumed its inquiry into industrial wages and working conditions.

S. E. Zimmerman, Lancaster, who made this allegation, testified much of the evidence "already has been proved to be without any basis whatsoever in fact."

Zimmerman asserted the move "is being engineered by people who never put a dollar behind industry in this state; never paid a dollar of industrial wages to any man or woman."

TESTIMONY REPUDIATED

Harry Bartman, Pottstown, told the committee he had obtained affidavits from one of the girls who testified before the inquiry at Norristown on July 7, stating that her testimony was false.

Bartman said he represented the Lincoln underwear mill, Pottstown, of which Carson C. Potter is one of the owners and the resident manager. He read a formal statement in which he said:

"One, Elizabeth Stefanelli under questioning by a member of the committee, charged Mr. Potter with 'getting familiar with some of the girls.'

"I have here the sworn statement of Elizabeth Stefanelli in which she states that 'everything I said about Mr. Potter was a lie.' She also asserts that what she said before the committee was prompted by the coaching and urging of one Kathleen Harper, whose suggestion was to 'tell everything you know and then add more to it.'"

He offered also a repudiation by Mary Pakach of her testimony.

IDENTIFIES WOMAN

Stephen Raushenbush, of the Department of Labor and Industry, identified "Kathleen Harper" as a Philadelphia woman who had become interested in the sweatshop campaign.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot quickly asked permission to introduce letters she said she had just received.

In the letters, the Misses Stephanelli and Pakach said Potter had forced them to make the affidavits Bartman read. The letter continued:

"He (Potter) had us crying. He laid papers before us. . . . We signed them. I didn't know what was in them."

Bartman explained he had read the affidavits to the girls and they had signed them. He said he had not seen the affidavits before he read them to the girls.

EMPLOYER HELD ON MANN ACT

ALLENTOWN, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—Nathan Dasher, alias Nathan Dashefsky, one of the operators of the D. and D. shirt plant at Northampton, yesterday was held in $3,500 bail for a hearing Thursday before United States Commissioner Theodore Gardner on charges of Mann Act violation.

Three girls charged he took them to New York for immoral purposes, under threat of "firing" them.

The girls' testimony to this effect, before an early hearing of striking textile workers' complaints by the state "sweatshop" investigating committee, was one of the developments which led Mrs. Gifford Pinchot to join the fight against sweatshops.

POLICE DEFIED BY PICKETS

LANSDALE, July 18.—(AP.)—Brushing aside police, several hundred strikers today blocked the reopening of the Dexdale hosiery mill. Borough authorities appealed to the Montgomery County sheriff for aid.

Coincident to the planned reopening of the mill, closed three weeks because of the strike, Burgess E. K. Bean issued a proclamation calling for enforcement of an old ordinance which requires citizens to "obey police on the highway at all times." The proclamation also forbade pickets to go within 50 feet of the mill.

State police, ordered by Gov. Pinchot to see that the law-abiding pickets were not molested, took no part in the activities.

More Beans in Pantries Here as Sales Gain

There may not be a chicken in every pot, but there are more beans and potatoes in Pittsburgh's pantries.

This, figuratively, is what Thomas E. Perry, Jr., president of the Pittsburgh Food Brokers' Association, had to say today in a report on food product sales in the Pittsburgh district.

Sales are up approximately 50 per cent over last year, he said. The gain was based on sales made by brokers to wholesale grocers.

Buyers don't seem to be interested in having chickens in the pots. Fancy goods or luxury foods have shown only a slight sale gain. Staple foods form the bulk of the increase, Perry said.

The upward movement, he added, started about May 1. Employment increases and higher wages were expected to be reflected in the growing food demand.

Increased wages by a shoe store chain, a bridge and track improvement program and a 52 per cent increase in Pennsylvania Railroad car loadings are a few of the advances in business in the Pittsburgh district today.

The Schiff Company, of Columbus, O., which operates 20 Kirby shoe stores in Pittsburgh and nearby towns, announced a 10 per cent pay increase.

A bridge and track improvement program of the Ashtabula division of the Pennsylvania Railroad today brought increased work for 300 employes. They will be on duty four days a week instead of three.

The Pennsylvania Railroad announced that car loadings in its Central region for the first half of July increased almost 52 per cent above the same period last year. The rise above June was 9 per cent.

Bondholders of Defunct Trolley Line Win Suit

Must records of two old Pittsburgh street car companies figured in a suit decided in Common Pleas Court today.

Judge Thomas M. Marshall ruled that the bondholders of the old Manchester Traction Company had a right to be paid out of the assets of the defunct company, and that the only asset was a $61,500 semi-annual payment the United Traction Company agreed to make when it leased the Manchester property years ago.

The United since has been acquired by the Pittsburgh Railways Company, which was a defendant in the suit. The latter claimed the $61,500 was in the form of a dividend. It also was claimed that as the Pittsburgh Railways held all the common stock of the Manchester concern, there was no necessity of declaring dividends.

Judge Marshall ruled in favor of J. Denniston Lyon, surviving trustee of the estate of the late Charles J. Clarke, who brought the suit. It was testified there was a default in the $61,500 semi-annual interest payment since October 1, 1930.

'AIMEE'S PET POODLE,' SAYS DAVE, TELLING OWN STORY

BOY SWIMMER BEATS NIAGARA WHIRLPOOL

Swept Into Vortex, Escapes After Grim Battle

International News Service.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., July 18.—William Kondrat, of Chatham, N. J., an embarrassed 18-year-old boy, seemed destined today to take the place of the late Tom Leach as the conqueror of the Niagara.

Leach went over the falls in a barrel, a feat that others repeated after him. But Willie Kondrat inadvertently succeeded in defying death in a manner that no man has done hertofore—and in living.

Last night Willie Kondrat swam through the rapids and the whirlpool of the Niagara.

SWIMS SAFELY

He succeeded in swimming safely through the furious waters where in 1883 Capt. Matthew Webb, the first conqueror of the English Channel, was dragged down to his death in the whirlpool

He was enjoying a forbidden swim last night in the great pool below the falls where the little steamer, the Maid-of-the-Mist, thrills passengers by approaching the cataract. Ignorant of the currents he was swept into the downstream.

Sightseers on the bridges, helpless to assist in any way, saw his head bobbing in the choppy waves as he went through the rapids. His chum, Charles Hecht, swam ashore and ran for the police.

Below the bridges, the Niagara, deep in its rock-walled gorge, makes a right angle turn to the right. This is the cause of the great whirlpool which has been churning there for centuries.

SWEPT TO WHIRLPOOL

Those on the bridge saw Kondrat swept down to the whirlpool and into the big wave where in the winter of 1912 watchers on the same bridge saw a man and his wife kneeling on a cake of ice disappear in the frothing waters after the fatal break of the ice bridge.

Kondrat was swept around in the vortex for two hours. No one could see him, for the cliffs above the whirlpool are margined with woods and it was growing dark.

Fighting desperately for his life he had to avoid being hurled against the rocks on the outside or sucked into the center of the vortex. He was between those terrors of the ancients, Scylla and Charybdis.

He finally succeeded in getting himself thrown out at the lower end of the pool and managed to reach the Canadian shore.

RUTH, BANKER, WINS PAROLE

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 18.—Linford F. Ruth, 72, former president of the closed Title and Trust Company of Western Pennsylvania, Connellsville, was paroled today after serving one year and eight months of a four-year jail term for embezzlement and misapplication of the bank's funds.

The aged former banker, alleged to have misused $150,000 of the bank's money, said he would go to Washington to help his family "now in a deplorable condition," but probably would return to Fayette County. Judge Thomas H. Hudson granted the parole.

Takes Marriage License

ROSE E. W. ALLEN . . . SHE'LL BE MRS. KENNETH COOLBAUGH

Miss Allen, who in 1931 vowed she'd "never love another" after her brother had killed her betrayer, socially prominent Francis Donaldson III, today awaiting her wedding hour with 22-year-old Buddy Coolbaugh, of Merion, Pa. She gave her age as 19.

EDDIE ALLEN'S SISTER TO WED

NORRISTOWN, Pa., July 18.—(INS.)—Pretty Rose Allen, who in 1931 said she would "never love another" when her brother killed her betrayer, Francis Donaldson III, scion of a socially prominent Main Line family, today obtained a marriage license at the courthouse here.

Rose gave her age as 19 and like her fiance, Kenneth (Buddy) Coolbaugh, 22, said she resides in Merion. The certificate was issued by Harry W. Akins, marriage license clerk, and the pair left quietly before news of their presence leaked out.

In March, Miss Allen revealed that she had found happiness in a new romance with Coolbaugh. Her presence today marked her first visit to the courthouse here since her bitter words were used by the commonwealth in an attempt to send her brother, Eddie Allen, gentleman rider, to the electric chair for Donaldson's death.

Eddie Allen was acquitted after a jury decided he fired the shots in self defense.

ELLIOTT FLYING TO SEE GIRL

CHICAGO, July 18. — (AP.) — Divorced in Nevada, Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, was reported en route today from Nevada to Chicago, where he may meet Miss Ruth Googins, of Fort Worth, Tex., with whom his name has been linked in a new romance.

Both young Roosevelt and the Texas girl, who is visiting Chicago's Century of Progress, however, have denied any matrimonial intentions.

Miss Googins could not be located at the hotel where she and her mother have been staying since July 9, but she was quoted in the Herald and Examiner as having said yesterday to attaches of the place.

"We won't be back tonight, for we're going to meet Mr. Elliott in the morning."

The plane bearing young Roosevelt to Chicago via Salt Lake City, Cheyenne and Omaha, left Reno last night and was due in Chicago about noon.

Young Roosevelt hurried to Reno to board the plane shortly after he and the former Elizabeth Donner, Philadelphia society girl, were divorced in Minden.

HELEN MORGAN SECRETLY WED TO OHIOAN

Marriage Took Place In New Castle 2 Months Ago

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—"Nobody Wants Me," a song that helped raise Helen Morgan to stardom as a torch singer, was discarded by her for another, "Along Came Bud," as she introduced her husband, Maurice (Bud) Maschke, Jr., of Cleveland, before a Chicago night club audience.

The marriage took place last May 15 at New Castle, Pa., and was a secret until Miss Morgan, in characteristic position atop a piano, sang her "Along Came Bud" song last night and the young Harvard law school graduate walked over to her side.

And as for her future—that's a matter that must be decided by her husband from now on. She said she was 28 and he was 25. She said:

"We wanted to keep our marriage a secret for seven years, because we thought it was nobody's business."

Another reason for the desire for secrecy was because Miss Morgan and Maschke said they didn't know how his father, a former Republican national committeeman, would take the news.

O. K. WITH DAD

But their fears on that score were removed when the elder Mrs. Maschke telephoned them:

"Father knows all and it's all right."

Then they told the story of their courtship—one of those old-fashioned romances that went on for seven years. They met in Cleveland while she was playing there and it was in Cleveland last May that they decided to slip off to New Castle to be married by Justice of the Peace Harrison M. Reynolds.

Miss Morgan, a native of Danville, Ill., where her first "blues" songs were sung to her mother as she perched on an ironing board, became a star under the guidance of the late Florenz Ziegfeld.

WANTS TO PLAY 'CAMILLE'

She starred in both "Show Boat" and "Sweet Adeline" and it was in "Americana," another musical revue, that she sang "Nobody Wants Me." Recently she has been singing in a local night club.

Last night young Maschke said he would not stand in the way of her career and revealed that it was her ambition to play "Camille" in a musical production.

He said he didn't care "where we live," but expected to return to Cleveland eventually. Right now he is awaiting the outcome of examinations he took a month ago for admittance to the Ohio bar.

FAMILY MUM ON O'CONNELL 'RELEASE'

Neighborhood Reports Kidnaped Youth's Freedom Near

ALBANY, N. Y., July 18.—(AP.)—An air of expectancy spread over Albany today as rumors flew thick and fast that Lieut. John J. O'Connell, Jr., was about to be returned by his kidnapers.

Some of the rumors apparently had their source close to the family.

The Putnam street neighborhood furnished a report which indicated that the 24-year-old scion of the politically powerful O'Connell family actually might have been returned late last night.

No newspapermen saw an automobile which neighbors said drove up to the O'Connell house after midnight, but numerous persons decared such a machine arrived, and that a few minutes later the O'Connell house was bright with lights and noisy with voices and laughter.

Today the house, from in front of which the National Guard lieutenant was kidnaped at midnight 11 days ago, was as quiet as others in the peaceful residential street.

Ed and Dan O'Connell, uncles of the young lieutenant and heads of the Albany Democratic machine, insisted that the kidnapers had not been contacted. They were in a cheerful mood, however.

It has been generally expected in circles close to the family that the kidnapers, who demanded $250,000 ransom, would release Lieut. O'Connell only with the understanding that he remain "under cover" at least 24 hours to give the abductors time to escape.

Iowa Probes 'Plot' To Kidnap Maytag

DES MOINES, Ia., July 18.—(INS.)—Park Findley, chief of the State Bureau of Investigation, today was investigating a purported plot to kidnap Fred L. Maytag, 76, millionaire washing machine manufacturer, of Chicago and Lake Geneva, Wis.

Brig. Gen. Findley announced that Maytag had a bodyguard of state troopers while attending a birthday celebration at his former home in Newton, Ia., last week. The manufacturer is still under guard at his Lake Geneva home, according to Findley.

Reached at his Lake Geneva home, Maytag said the reports were "amusing and unfounded." He denied that "extra guards" were about him or on his estate there.

According to Findley, the millionaire was to have been abducted when he arrived in Newton last Thursday.

Ex-Convict Questioned In Banker's Kidnaping

ALTON, Ill., July 18.—(AP.)—An ex-convict was being questioned today by Department of Justice operatives as the investigation continued into the kidnaping of August Luer, 77-year-old Alton banker who was released on a lonely country road early Sunday after being held five days.

Percy M. Fitzgerald, of St. Louis, whose police record in that city and suburbs dates back to 1913, was arrested last night by police at Madison, Ill., just across the Mississippi River from St. Louis.

Known to the underworld as the "Dice Box Kid," he was taken into custody at one of the haunts which he frequents after federal agents had been watching the place for two days. His arrest was the first tangible result of the Department of Justice investigation, which has been cloaked in the usual secrecy with which the federal agents work.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 18.—(AP.)—The Rev. R. E. Close, superintendent of the Oregon Anti-Liquor League, reported to police here he was abducted from his home by two men shortly after midnight.

He said they demanded $12,000 ransom and that he escaped from them near McMinnville after knocking one man from his automobile.

Aimee's Pet Poodle

MR. AND MRS. DAVID L. HUTTON, JR. . . HE: "I'M A PUPPET"

Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson and her husband of 22 months, who today tells his story of their stormy married life after he married not only Aimee "but Angelus Temple." Mr. Hutton tells of how he always felt more like Aimee's little pet poodle.

Evangelist in Need Of Funds; Ridicules Divorce Suit

By WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service.

PARIS, July 18.—Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, Los Angeles evangelist, who was sued for divorce by David Hutton, her third husband, yesterday, hopes to star in a film on her return to the Pacific coast.

This was learned from friends of Mrs. Hutton today after she had departed for the United States aboard the liner City of Havre.

The evangelist is in need of funds, these friends said, and has interested Los Angeles producers in a scenario on which she and her husband collaborated. It deals with the career of an evangelist and she expects to play the leading role.

The story has the evangelist arriving in a town to open services the same night as a carnival. Hutton wrote the first ending which was quite tragic. He had all the townsfolk attending the carnival and the evangelist ultimately dying in the poor house.

But Aimee changed all that. In her version the evangelist converts all the carnival players and the film ends happily.

STILL IN LOVE

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—(Universal)—Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, famous Los Angeles evangelist, does not want to be divorced by her husband, she said in a radiogram received today by Universal Service and the Los Angeles Examiner from the steamship Havre.

Mrs. McPherson Hutton's radiogram reads as follows:

"Reports concerning divorce are preposterous. My husband and I love each other with deepest devotion and understanding. God brought us together. We expect to labor side by side in Christian work while we live.

"Mr. Hutton sent me abroad for my health. By his request I hasten to return to our home. His letters and cablegrams were filed in confidence. My husband knows how ill I have been and if he is able he will meet me in Baltimore and these heartbreaking rumors will be at an end.

(Signed) MRS. DAVID HUTTON.

HUTTON CRUEL, SAYS ROLFE

LOS ANGELES, July 18.—(AP.)—Incensed over the charges of mental cruelty, which David L. Hutton, Jr., brought against Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton in his divorce action, Rolfe McPherson, her son, said today that "whatever cruelty there has been is on his shoulders, not my mother's."

Young McPherson declared he and his sister, Roberta Semple Smythe, who is accompanying her mother to the United States from France, would never have left the parsonage at Angelus Temple had it not been that Hutton made it "so unpleasant for us while we lived there."

Instances of alleged cruelty were cited by the evangelist's son. He said:

"One instance was the manner in which Hutton broke the news of the St. Pierre case. My mother was ill at the time and barely able to be out of bed. He broke into the room and shouted the news at her. She was so astounded and hurt that she fainted, falling and fracturing her skull."

'NOTHING SANE' ABOUT TEMPLE, HE ASSERTS

Tired of Sitting on 'Volcano,' Will Go on Stage

By DAVID HUTTON
As told to Marian Rhea.
International News Service.

Los Angeles, July 18.—Life with even as charming and remarkable a person as Aimee Semple McPherson wasn't what it was cracked up to be.

Far from being a "prince consort" as I was referred to many times, and enjoying the friendship and respect of my associates at Angelus Temple as any self-respecting man would hope to do, I was just Aimee's pet poodle. I had plenty of affection—yes—but no privileges.

From the very beginning it was this way. I remember several years ago that the husband of Ruth Elder objected to being called Mr. Ruth Elder and finally filed a suit for divorce. Well, I object to being "Mr. Aimee Semple McPherson." I always did and I always will.

'NOTHING SANE'

I felt all the time as though I were living in some unreal hectic realm in which nothing was logical or sane, and in which I really had no part, but was only a puppet waiting for someone to pull the strings.

When Aimee got sick and went away Angelus Temple became a seething volcano of unrest, intrigue, and counter-intrigue, with nobody knowing from one day to the next what was going to happen.

As for me, I don't want to be sitting on that volcano any more. I am convinced that what has already happened out there in the way of trouble is only a mere bagatelle in comparison with what's going to happen now.

Aimee Semple McPherson is a wonderful and dynamic woman. She is probably the greatest evangelist in the world. But she is also a straw in the wind sometimes—blown which ever way the pressure is the greatest.

SELFISH PEOPLE

There are some fine, true, God-fearing people in Angelus Temple, and there are others who are working purely and simply for their own interests—exploiting the religion which built the institution.

The whole world knows the facts that Aimee has been defendant in a dozen suits or more. It seems as though someone is always trying to take her for money. Most of those suits have been settled out of court in order to avoid publicity.

That is another policy I haven't agreed with. Aimee wanted to settle my own suit—the one Miss St. Pierre brought against me—but I wouldn't do it. I don't think it is Christian-like to pay off.

Of course, this may not be the case always, but in a lot of instances it is. And so I fought my suit because I wasn't afraid. And even though Miss St. Pierre got a judgment, I am glad I did. Incidentally in response to many questions, I have announced I will settle that judgement with her probably some time this week.

CAREER OVERSHADOWED

As for my own career, it became practicaly negligible with my marriage with Aimee.

At the time, I was giving over 100 voice lessons a week, conducting a voice clinic and conducting auditions for radio and motion pictures. I was making more money than I was ever paid as Angelus Temple business manager. But all that went by the board. I kept on singing, it is true, but for nothing.

Later, I was offered vaudeville and screen contracts, making a career such as I now contemplate, possible. But was I allowed to accept them?

I certainly was not.

Another thing, when Aimee and I were in Central America the last time we had a long talk and I demanded she let me go to work, and she agreed. It was all set, but when we came back to the temple, she got sick almost right away and so I gave up my own plans and continued my work at the temple.

STILL PLAYS POODLE

And so I just kept on playing the pet poodle.

I am not only quitting because of humiliation and trouble but to protect my own financial interest.

Here I might say that I don't want any money from Aimee, nor do I expect to get any.

I am about to embark upon a vaudeville career in which my weekly salary amounts to four figures.

Incidentally, I am not being billed as "Aimee Semple McPherson's husband." I have no wish to exploit her fame in my own behalf. Nor am I out to sling mud. I am simply seeking my own future happiness and in so doing I wish Aimee—or "Betty," as I have always called her—God-speed.

I wish her all success and happiness and I do not want ever to wreck the faith of the few loyal and true followers she has left at Angelus Temple. I have no spirit of revenge.

That's all, I guess, except one thing—

I thought I married Aimee Semple McPherson. And that was all right. But I found, instead, that I married Angelus Temple and that wasn't so good.

FOLLOWING HER HUSBAND BY INCHES

POST REACHES SECOND GOAL IN SIBERIA

again at 9:02 a. m. (2:02 a. m., Pittsburgh time) with the intention of getting some badly-needed rest at Irkutsk.

LOST ON WAY

Post was lost twice on the way here from Moscow, and only his sense of direction, his automatic pilot having failed, enabled him to conquer fog and rain and to land safely here.

At one time he had to fly at an altitude of 21,000 feet so bad was the fog. Once he landed in a field—he did not know where. Again he landed near Tartarsk, 250 miles west of Novosibirsk, and once more, by sheer luck, he admitted, he found his direction.

He had left the Soviet capital at 5:12 p. m. Monday (10:12 a. m., Pittsburgh time) and arrived here 13 hours and 15 minutes later, and 66 hours 17 minutes after leaving New York.

WEATHER CHANGES PLAN

The Oklahoman had planned to fly directly to Khabarovsk, Siberia, his scheduled jumping-off place for the trans-oceanic jaunt, but bad weather, which had dogged him most of the way from the Ural Mountains to Novosibirsk and caused him to land twice before reaching the latter point, forced him to decide to spend the night in Irkutsk, rather than try to go on to Khabarovsk.

Weather reports given him during the brief pause here told of extremely unfavorable flying conditions all the way to Khabarovsk.

He was 16 hours and 57 minutes ahead of the time he and Harold Gatty took for a like distance when he left, for the pair stayed here 9 hours and 13 minutes on their world flight two years ago.

JOURNEY HALF OVER

At this point he had completed about half of his world journey. Irkutsk is about 890 miles farther on. The estimated distance from Irkutsk to Khabarovsk is 1,300 miles. Thus, Post will lose several hundreds miles, for Irkutsk is south of the direct line between here and Khabarovsk.

Ivan Roncharoff, chief of the Novosibirsk Airport, was talking to the Associated Press correspondent in Moscow when Post arrived, at the time when some concern was felt for his safety.

Almost simultaneously the chief heard that Post had passed over Tartarsk, 250 miles west of here. That was the first report of him since he left Moscow.

150-MILE GAIT

Post's average speed across the Atlantic to Berlin was about 150 miles an hour. From Moscow here his speed was about 138 miles.

At this rate, he declared confidently:

"I'll be back in New York in less than three full days."

When he arrived in Moscow from Koenigsberg he was 4 hours 24 minutes ahead of the previous mark, set in the same plane. Although tired and worn from the pace he set for himself, he insisted on taking off after 2 hours and 52 minutes.

Driving him on was his self-imposed schedule because of which he said he was not proud of his time from Germany to Moscow, he declared.

"I hoped to be at Irkutsk by this time. But I still have got a chance to beat our record; and I am out to do it."

Soviet mechanics were interested in Post's automatic pilot, which most of them saw for the first time. They asked about it. Through an interpreter, he replied:

"That is a mechanical mike."

When they asked what a "mike" was, he explained.

The robot, he said, had been a disappointment and had caused such difficulties that he had to steer the plane manually all the way. He was weak with fatigue when he arrived in Moscow, but he refused to sleep, preferring to visit a barber and supervise the repairing of a leak in the gasoline feed.

The Oklahoman took on 178 gallons of gasoline here and 12 gallons of oil, but refused to listen to entreaties that he sleep. He rested a short while on a couch in the airport building.

GREETED BY GIRL

Miss Fay Gillis, an American aviatrix who has served as his representative, greeted Post on his arrival.

She fed him as he lay on the couch—fruit and bouillon. They talked about American aviation and people they knew in New York.

Miss Gillis gave this account, after talking with Post:

"Wiley landed twice before arriving here, because he lost the way, and almost missed Novosibirsk because he was still floundering about in cloudy and rainy weather when he got here.

"Only a lucky guess on his part, which helped him come down at the local airport, saved him, for the fog was pretty bad.

"En route here, he flew at an altitude of 21,000 feet for two hours because of the adverse conditions, and nearly passed out.

"He lost the railway somewhere—even he does not know where—and he decided the only thing to do was to come down.

"He landed on a field beside a road, and he wasn't long there before two peasants came by in a horse-drawn cart. He could not understand them and they couldn't understand him, but he finally made them understand that he wanted to go to Novosibirsk.

"Thereupon one said Novosibirk was 300 kilometers westward, and the other maintained positively that Novosibirsk was 1,400 kilometers east.

"They finally agreed that Novosibirsk was east and not west, but they did not reconcile their difference as to distance.

"His second landing was near Tartarsk—Wiley has no idea as to the time—and he was vague about that part of the trip, except that he found his proper direction to Novosibirsk.

"If he hadn't been a pretty good judge of distance he would have passed over this place, despite the lights on the field and other preparations we had made for him, because the fog was thick, and close to the ground.

"It gave me a thrill to see that Winnie Mae come down here after almost a month of waiting for him.

"Wiley has promised me a ride when I get back to New York in an improvised seat behind the gasoline tank, on which I was to have ridden with him to Khabarovsk.

"Believe me, I intend to collect that ride."

SHOOTS WOMAN AND ENDS LIFE

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 18.—Clyde Myers, 37, war veteran, ended his life today after shooting the woman he loved, the Coroner reported.

In his home at Summerhill, at 2 a. m., he locked all the doors, twice shot Mrs. Hilda B. White, 30, then shot himself through the head, investigation by the Coroner indicated.

Dying, Mrs. White broke a window and climbed out of the house. She was reported in critical condition this afternoon.

Coroner C. W. Davis said that Myers, divorced father of four children, had left a note explaining that he was conscience-stricken that "the affair had gone far enough."

The Coroner said Mrs. White had told the police that Myers had tried to have her sign a note declaring she loved him more than she loved her husband.

RADIO REPORTS MATTERN ON NOME HOP

SEATTLE, July 18.—(AP.)—Jimmie Mattern's jinx—the "top of the world country"—hid him again today.

Puzzled watchers wondered whether he was again in the air attempting to be the first man to fly around the world alone, or was still nursing a broken ankle in Siberia or down in the sea or ice lands.

Out of the north last night came a sketchy wireless message saying Mattern had taken off from Anadyr with a Russian pilot in a Soviet plane.

Levanovsky, crack Russian flier, had been detailed by his government to fly a seaplane from Khabarovsk to Anadyr to take Mattern to Nome to continue his globe-circling flight.

The unofficial and unconfirmed report of the takeoff said Mattern was expected to land in Nome at 6 p. m. Nome time (1 a. m. today Pittsburgh time), but there was no further word of the Texas aviator.

His backers and members of the relief group, all equally certain Mattern wanted to continue his flight as soon as possible, were left in doubt as to whether he had started or was still grounded in Siberia. William Alexander, head of the relief expedition, only a few days ago was advised by the Texan that the Russians were treating him "like a prince" but that he wanted "action."

Balbo Crashes Piloting Scooter At World's Fair

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—Gen. Italo Balbo saw the World Fair at close range today and without the usual crowd of admirers who have dogged his footsteps since his arrival at the head of the Italian air expedition.

Slipping away from a society event planned in his honor at the exclusive Casino Club, he gathered a half-dozen friends, changed from his uniform into a dark business suit, donned a slouch hat with brim low over his eyes and visited the fair grounds early today.

In his party were Mrs. Morton Schwartz and a Mrs. Alexander, both of New York City.

Heading straight for the Midway, the serious looking Italian Minister of Aviation, whose youth is belied by his heavy beard, made for the auto scooter concession, whose patrons drive about in tiny electrically operated cars that steer opposite to an automobile.

Then they turned to a baseball throwing contest, where Gen. Balbo revealed that the Italian fliers were led across the Atlantic Ocean by a southpaw. He hit the mark and proved equally as efficient a few minutes later at a target shooting concession.

His downfall was a night club, for just as the party prepared to enter a burst of applause greeted them. It was meant for an act of the floor show, but the General, believing he had been recognized, and, understanding no English, refused to enter and hurriedly left the grounds.

BALBO TO FLY FOR NEW YORK TOMORROW

By CARL L. TURNER
International News Service.

CHICAGO, July 18.—Chicago heaped additional honors on Gen. Italo Balbo and his Italian airmen today before saying farewell to the intrepid armada.

The outstanding event of the official farewell ceremony was a parade down Michigan avenue at which it was estimated more than 1,000,000 Chicagoans roared their departing tribute.

Although Gen. Balbo and most of his officers slept until almost noon, after an exhaustive day and night of festivities, it was announced in behalf of the flight leaders that the time of departure would be at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. Final preparations have been made for the getaway and the route to be taken to New York has been determined.

LAKE ROUTE TO N. Y.

The official announcement was as follows:

"Gen. Balbo and his men will take off for New York at 8 a. m. Wednesday. They will land on Jamaica Bay, off Floyd Bennett Field. The trip is expected to require 6 to 6½ hours.

"The route of flight will be Chicago to Toledo, to Cleveland, to Buffalo, to Oswego, to the Hudson River at Albany, down the Hudson to Manhattan across the East River to Queens, thence to the landing point."

During the New York stay Balbo and his 24 officers will make a hurried trip by American planes to Washington for a luncheon with President Roosevelt, a banquet, and a reception.

The armada's ships are in excellent condition, it was announced, for the return flight, which is to be made to Italy by way of the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland, instead of via the Azores as originally planned.

UPHOLDS PLANES

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—Heavier-than-air machines as preferable to dirigibles have a staunch advocate in Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian air minister, who led a squadron of 96 airmen across the Atlantic to Chicago in a mass flight of 24 seaplanes.

In an exclusive interview to the Associated Press he said:

"This flight has proved that heavier-than-air ships are the only practicable means of long-distance flying.

"I was convinced of it seven years ago shortly after becoming Italian minister of aviation. Italy has built no dirigibles since that time. Now, I have ample proof of my belief.

"Even a flight around the world, I believe, would add little to the proof that mass flight is practicable."

Reunion of Flier And Wife Balked By Tragedy

CAMDEN, N. J., July 18.—(INS.)—Capt. Stephen Darius, American-Lithuanian flier killed when he and Stanley T. Girenas crashed in Germany on an attempted non-stop flight to Kaunas, Lithuania, from New York, was en route to his homeland to be reconciled with his wife and 7-year-old daughter, it was disclosed today.

Mrs. Leokadja Szkemo, who said she was an aunt of Mrs. Darius, said the flyer left his wife in 1927 when he came back to the United States after serving in the Lithuanian air force.

The couple, Mrs. Szkemo said, had corresponded recently.

Coast Hop Resumed By 2 Negro Fliers

KANSAS CITY, Kan., July 18.—(AP.)—Two Negro aviators making a transcontinental flight in the interest of aviation by members of their race continued their flight toward the Pacific Coast today.

The two, Dr. Albert E. Forsythe, Atlantic City, and C. Alfred Anderson, Bryn Mawr, Pa., hopped off from Fairfax airport here. They planned to make a stop at Wichita, Kan.

SEA HOP HEROES LIE IN STATE

KAUNAS, Lithuania, July 18.—(INS.)—The bodies of two Lithuanian-American heroes were placed in Kaunas Cathedral today, there to lie in state until they are accorded a national funeral.

The high honors were given Capt. Stephen Darius and Stanley T. Girenas, Chicago residents, who crashed to their deaths near Soldin, Germany, while attempting a non-stop flight from New York to Kaunas.

The bodies of the two men were brought here today by air from Germany, their coffins draped in flags.

Flags were at half-mast throughout the nation. The army was ordered to go into mourning for a period of one month. Capt. Darius was a former member of the Lithuanian air forces.

U. S. TAKES AIM AT CORRUPT POLITICIANS

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Corrupt politicians will be one of the objectives of Attorney General Cummings' war against racketeers.

Believing that contacts made with the unscrupulous criminal element have contributed materially to the success of gangsters and racketeers to avoid prosecution and to escape penitentiary sentence, Cummings has asked Joseph B. Keenan, special assistant in charge of the crime drive, to give especial attention to their activities.

Just what approach will be made to this phase of the crime problem has not been determined. However, it was the opinion of Department of Justice experts that in many cases the corrupt politicians may be brought within the law through efforts to thwart justice and for the acceptance of bribes, directly and indirectly.

FORTUNES FOR LAWLESS

Cummings declared frankly that racketeers developed into an affluent group of criminals through the vast fortunes gained from the distribution of illicit liquor had been placed in a position to buy more guns, provide bonds when arrested, secure pardons when convicted and to make contacts with corrupt politicians.

One powerful weapon that the Attorney General has so far held back, but may use in the drive to disclose what politicians, including high officials, have done in behalf of gangsters and racketeers would be the publication of the names of these individuals acting for the criminal element.

When applications are made for pardon and parole of those convicted of violations of the federal law, endorsers' names must appear. Also when letters urging clemency are written these are normally appended to the application by the parole board or pardon attorney.

DEMANDS WITHDRAWN

Cummings said, however, that the issuance of these names, especially of those who write to or confer with the Attorney General in the effort to prevent prosecutions or to bring about clemency must be used advisedly, if at all. He explained that in many instances the applications are made in good faith, without a full knowledge of the facts. When the nature of the crime and the charges against the person sought are explained many of the demands for clemency are withdrawn, Cummings said.

Cummings made a plea for the development of a new psychology under which the public will cooperate with all law enforcement agencies in the effort to solve crimes. He spoke of the apathy of the public toward helping these agencies, engendered, he thought, possibly from the efforts of the government to enforce unpopular laws.

BARE EVIDENCE AGAINST HASSEL

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—(AP.)—Its action unprecedented in this district, the government has laid bare grand jury testimony in an effort to prove that Max Hassel, slain Reading (Pa.) beer baron, was the head of a ring which operated a dozen breweries in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Among them was the Health Beverage Company of Reading. It was into the quasi-judicial hearing by which the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol seeks to revoke this brewery's permit that the government introduced the grand jury records yesterday.

Permission to do so had been granted by a federal judge and counsel for the government used it as a final trump, introducing the data at the final session of the hearing.

YOUNG MOTHER, CHILD SLAIN

PONTIAC, Mich., July 18.—(AP.)—A 22-year-old mother, who engaged in a gun duel with an intruder in her home, and her 4-year-old daughter were dead today and the slayer dead by his own hand.

The husband, at work when the tragedy occurred, said Mrs. Rose Gaylock, the slain woman, had been subjected to the unwelcome attentions of Charles King, 32.

Police found Mrs. Gaylock dead of gunshot wounds late last night shortly after neighbors had reported hearing shots, and the child, her skull crushed, near death. She died later.

The husband, when police notified him where he worked, urged that King be sought. When police went to the house where King lived there was a shot and the fugitive was found dying of a bullet wound in his head.

King also bore other wounds, and police said they were inflicted by Mrs. Gaylock as she fought for her life.

'Human' Panther Seen Near Mingo

MINGO, Pa., July 18.—The man-like panther, terror of numerous Monongahela River Valley communities, has made its appearance in this section and last night and early today was the object of a search by 150 men.

Several reported seeing the animal, whose coloring is said to be red, white and black, and which has a short tail and cries like a baby, but it was too fleet for them to shoot. It lives on pigs, sheep and chickens.

HEIR WOUNDED BY FRIEND DIES

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—(AP.)—Shot in the back, shoulder and head, Isaac D. Hetzell, II, died last night in a hospital, the second victim of a quarrel which police said occurred over payment of damages for an automobile accident.

Investigators declared Hetzell was shot last Friday by his close friend, Harry Maupay, 21, who then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head.

At the bedside of the grandson and heir of the million-dollar estate of the late Councilman Isaac D. Detzell was his bride of less than a year. She was a witness to the shooting.

Maupay could not collect damages after the accident last January because the company in which Hetzell carried insurance was bankrupt. Police said the quarrel began after Maupay demanded that Hetzell pay the damages. Maupay resided in Fort Washington, Montgomery County.

GANDHI TO MAKE LONE FIGHT

BOMBAY, July 18.—(INS.)—Mahatma Gandhi, aged Indian Nationalist leader, today announced a suspension of the mass civil disobedience movement against the British government, but stated "individual" disobedience will continue as a protest against the state of India's millions of "untouchables."

The announcement followed exchange of several telegrams between Gandhi and Lord Willington, the Viceroy, in which the latter refused to grant Gandhi a requested interview for discussion of a truce.

Gandhi, stating the Viceroy's reply created a grave situation "fraught with danger," ordered cessation of all functions of his party organization.

WALTHER HEAD URGES YOUTH AID NATION

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—American youth had been called upon today to fill the niches created by the federal government's social, political and economic innovations.

These innovations, E. J. Gallmeyer, president of the Walther League, told 4,000 members of the organization gathered for its forty-first international convention, were the vehicles on which young people might ride to future accomplishments.

The nation's future was largely dependent upon its youth, Gallmeyer, postmaster of Fort Wayne, Ind., said, adding that those on the threshold of life's serious tasks were better equipped and were confronted with less obstacles than those of a century ago, despite economic disorders of the past three years.

ROOSEVELT LAUDED

Commenting upon the administration's economic program, Gallmeyer said "the competitive system needed a new prophet—spell it either way—:profit' also."

President Roosevelt was that prophet, he said.

Gallmeyer traced man's progress during the past century in science and said religion had kept pace. He added that the price of religious liberty was eternal vigilance and declared youth was responsible for seeing that it was not abridged.

Plea for closer co-operation with the league's foreign divisions was made by the Rev. Erwin Umbach, executive secretary. He urged greater league promotion work through publications and told the young Lutherans to "continue to emphasize the benefits of the Walther League in developing leadership qualities by giving opportunity to accept responsibility."

LEAGUE ADVANCING

Dr. Umbach declared that scrutiny of district presidents' reports had convinced him that the league "has not gone backwards, but is advancing."

Optimism concerning the league's work was again expressed by Walter Helmke, chairman of the international executive board.

League members, representing 48 states and 15 foreign nations were welcomed by William E. Schlake, commissioner of Lincoln Park and representative of Gov. Henry Horner, of Illinois.

He commended the league for its "strong adherence to the organization's purpose—to assist the church" and for its avoidance of "unwarranted interference in politics and other matters foreign to church purposes."

A letter from President Roosevelt was read before the convention. Addressed to President Gallmeyer, it said:

"May I take this occasion of your gathering as an opportunity to congratulate you, and through you the membership of your league, for its accomplishments in the past and to assure you of my best wishes for your success in the future."

MILITIA ROUGH ON LEGISLATORS

MT. GRETNA, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—Yesterday was a hard day on Pennsylvania legislators who visited the state's citizen-soldiers at their summer encampments.

Members of the Senate and House Military Affairs committees were blinded, deafened and bruised by tear gas, artillery fire and rough roads.

The bang of 75 and 155-millimeter guns as they arrived at the camp of the 109th and 176th Field Artillery at Indiantown Gap, made their ears ring for a while.

After watching artillery shells blow up targets representing machine gun nests, they were accompanied to Mt. Gretna by Maj. Gen. Edward C. Shannon and Brig. Gen. Edward Martin.

Watching infantry advance through smoke and tear gas screens, several members of the committees were enveloped in the chemical fumes as the wind shifted and wept copiously until the effects wore off.

Then Senator Richard Williamson, of Huntingdon, was bounced in an automobile crossing railroad tracks en route to Division Hill, and was bruised on the head.

HOPE DAWNING FOR BOY LIFER

WALLA WALLA, Wash., July 18.—(AP.)—Hubert Niccolls, 14, scared boy burglar who shot and killed a sheriff two years ago, saw new hope dawn over the walls of the State Penitentiary here today.

The Governor, the Lieutenant Governor and many others are interesting themselves in his release.

Gov. Clarence D. Martin, from Olympia, announced that after two visits to the boy who slew Sheriff John Wormell, of Asotin County, he had decided to appoint a clinic of experts to examine the boy and determine whether he would not be of more value to society in a training school, with the possibility of parole ahead, than serving a life sentence.

The boy, interested in music and aviation, was delighted by a visit of Lieut. Gov. Victory A. Meyers, who left his dance band in Seattle and flew here with his son, young Victor Junior.

This announcement was made in Washington today when it was revealed that $40,000,000 had been allocated to nine states including West Virginia, for road improvement. The only allocation of funds affecting Pittsburgh was the grant of $285,000 to the Commerce Department Bureau of Aeronautics for combining radio facilities in 57 cities, of which Pittsburgh was one.

G. L. SCHRAMM INDORSED FOR CHILD COURT

Out of the stormy meeting of 58 representatives of social and civic agencies today came an indorsement of Attorney Gustave L. Schramm for the Juvenile bench.

They had quite a time of it, especially the women. And when the storm clouds evaporated, Mrs. John M. Phillips, a member of the Board of Education, had won the issue over Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, crusading member of the Citizens League.

Mrs. Smith was one of a committee of seven which recommended Attorney Edward O. Tabor, of the Citizens League.

MRS. PHILLIPS OBJECTS

Up rose Mrs. Phillips to object. She asserted the committee was to have suggested three candidates, one to be chosen by the entire meeting.

Others supported Mrs. Phillips. Miss Suzanne Beatty declared "it seems remarkable" that the committee had attached to its report the qualifications questionnaire filled out by Attorney Tabor, but had failed to report the questionnaires turned in by the other two, Attorneys Schramm and Herman F. Ruoff.

So the committee's report was tabled. The qualifications of all three lawyers were extolled.

Mrs. Smith rather indignant, rose up to say:

"The committee has been treated shabbily. I think you owe an apology to the committee."

Dr. Carl August Voss, of the German Evangelical Protestant Church, added fuel to the argumentative fires by predicting that Tabor, first choice, could not be elected because he had "embittered the political forces of Allegheny County."

SECRECY PLEA FAILS

Sidney Teller, of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, failed to win a second to his motion that the meeting close its doors to reporters.

A half-dozen representatives cried "sheep-heads" when Dr. Ludwig B. Bernstein, of the Jewish Family Welfare, reported that 59 of the 67 members of the Social Workers Group some time ago had picked Schramm as their favorite. This Dr. Bernstein denied.

So a secret vote was taken and Schramm won and the representatives calmed down to give him a unanimous indorsement.

AUTO LICENSE RACKET BARED

HARRISBURG, July 18.—(AP.)—Secretary of Revenue Leon D. Metzger has advised motorists to ignore any efforts to "coerce" them into joining organizations under threat of losing their automobile licenses.

Metzger reported receipt of a complaint from an unnamed owner who charged he was threatened with loss of registration privileges "unless he joins a certain organization. Metzger said:

"The threat has also been made that registration renewal applications for 1934 will be withheld unless a membership is taken out in the organization.

Urging that such threats be ignored and reported to the revenue department, the secretary explained:

"Owners will continue to hold their registration privileges so long as they comply with the vehicle code."

MERGER LOOMS FOR ENGINEMEN

CLEVELAND, July 18.—(AP.)—A merger of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen was seen as likely today. The triennial convention of the former organization authorized its amalgamation committee to draw up a tentative agreement with the relations committee of the B. of L. F. & E.

If finally approved by the two brotherhoods, the merger would bring together 125,000 union enginemen, who in the past have sometimes been at odds on matters of jurisdiction, membership, seniority and other matters.

Meanwhile the engineers approached the end of the convention they started on June 6 by returning to the forces of Grand Chief Engineer Alvanley Johnston, who repulsed the attempts of a group of progressives to unseat them. The administration has won seven of the 11 places on the advisory board and has a chance to the 11 places on the advisory board and has a chance to win one that has not yet been filled.

Bradford Swindle Suspect Arrested

U. S. TO BACK RUSS CREDITS

By PAUL C. YATES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The administration, through the R. F. C., today was ready to match dollars with American private industry in extending commercial credits to Soviet Russia.

Seventy thousand bales of cotton were being loaded at Galveston and New Orleans for Russian consumption under the first credit arrangement in which the R. F. C. participated. This involved a loan of about $3,000,000 to American cotton exporting firms.

Business interests, although long desirous of entry to the rapidly-expanding Russian market for raw materials and manufactured products, apparently were slow to take advantage of the governmental policy. Jesse H. Jones, R. F. C. chairman, said:

"We have received a few informal inquiries since announcement of the loan to finance a 70,000-bale cotton export to Russia. On this transaction, the government is taking about 50 per cent of the risk.

"We probably would consider other commodity export movements presented on that same general basis."

B. & O. Recalls Men To New Castle Jobs

NEW CASTLE, Pa., July 18.—Freight business is increasing rapidly at the New Castle terminal of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, necessitating the calling back to work of 15 brakemen and a like number of enginemen and firemen. Orders to increase the yard and clerical forces are expected. Additional shopmen have also been added in the past few weeks.

Attorney Ralph W. Day, in the excitement of landing the fish, fell and broke his leg in two places but clung to his rod and landed the catch before going to the hospital.

Orchardists Open War on Beavers

OMAK, Wash., July 18.—(AP.)—Orchardists on North Pogue flat have appealed to the State Game Department for permision to trap beavers.

The beavers are attempting to build a dam across Johnson Creek, thereby shutting off water from orchards.

Globe-Trotting

—By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN—

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

The swellest job in the world is telling the news when you are saying things people like to hear.

Nothing gives you more pep than when you are announcing pay raises, and other prosperity items, or the victorious accomplishments of some heroic feat. I don't mind losing morning listeners who write:

"Sorry, Louis, can't hear you in the morning anymore. I got to go to work."

* * *

I see I was unfair to Mrs. Barbara Uhler's hollyhocks, so far the prize winners in the contest. I neglected to tell you that they are 10 feet 6, and still growing.

* * *

Maybe there is something to those scientific statements warning against an invasion of the insect kingdom. We haven't erected a successful barrier to the ant yet, when we get the problem of water bugs around the garage of the D. F. Jones' on Stratford avenue. Until we get the remedy, Mrs. Jones, screen the sewer drain.

* * *

Lots of letters from people in need of baby carriages, wheel chairs, high chairs, artificial limbs keep coming in. It's distressing not to be able to do something for all the less fortunate globe trotters.

If you tell me that you have some article that you are not using and somebody else could use, I'll send a truck out to pick it up.

* * *

Great minds do run in the same channel. After yesterday's 2:15, when all the strawberry festivals, firemen's fetes, card parties and picnics were announced, the operators from WJAS and WCAE rang the phone simultaneously to chirp:

"What! No bingo?"

Aircaster Goes Back to Work And Finds Radio in Throes Of Big 'Cleanup' Drive

By AIRCASTER

By the guilty look on the otherwise stoical phiz of the good and industrious Miss MacGillicuddy, as I dutifully and somewhat lamely took up the grind today, I think I know whom to blame for at least part of the misadventures of a nautical and rather nice vacation.

Naturally, I couldn't swear that it was she who thought up the clever plan of sending me an anchor suggestively equipped with a collar my size. Nor will I say for sure that it was she who saw that one of the life-preservers was packed with lead and old iron.

That Radio Play

Part of the divertissement of my holiday consisted of scanning some of the engaging thoughts presented herein by guest contributors, all of whom I want to thank profusely.

Not the least striking of them was Jack Lait's timely lament concerning the failure of radio to produce a humanized play providing in intimate and real picture of the inside of the industry and of its foibles.

I might add to Jack's lament, the warning that if some ambitious playwright is contemplating such an opus he had best hasten it along before some of the best current material becomes obsolete.

The expectant radio playwright should be cautioned now that, within a few weeks, the comedy of radio will have been cleansed to a degree that will defy any thespian efforts at coy burlesque.

I hear that John Royal, who has decided that the NBC at least, shall remain pure in heart, at any cost, is plotting a purging party so far as microphone fun is concerned.

For three weeks he has been bending a critical ear to the gags, puns and humorous cacklings of the comedians, and he has found a growing tendency toward off-color fancies. And there are creditable reports that regardless of what sponsors of such material think or say, a staff censorship is to be created to protect the chastity of kilocycle wit.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Scrambled Eggs

They say Joseph Hergesheimer's grouch against Palm Beach how he has panned it in the mags lately) was the result of the biggest party that was flung for him there. Just as he was dazzling a group of debs with fine talk, Count Von Luckner took the whole group away by coming up and tearing a telephone book in half with his bare paws!

Somewhat discouraged, the precious Hergie strolled to the remaining girl in the party, who finally ascertained that he was a writer, upon which she promised to introduce him to a real author —and brought up Arthur Somers Roche. Hergesheimer packed that same night.

Mencken, than whom there is no more graphic descriptionist, recently gave the most vivid and accurate description of British cooking.

He said that the British were the only people in the world who could cook roast beef—until it was blue!

I heard Jimmy Durante really pulled this one at lunch here the other noon: "The penalty of fame!" lamented Jimmy, "oh, the expense of it! I went into a drug store to get me a coupla 10-cent cigars and the clerk looks at me and says: 'Hello, Jimmie.'

"'Hello,' I says, 'gimme t'ree Admirations fer half a dollar!'"

The surgeon who took Jackie Cooper's appendix out was under the impression until after the operation that it was Jackie Coogan he sliced. He had never heard of Jackie Cooper. (The surgeon told pals.)

The words "child actor" had crept into his bean, and even though he looked at the chart and history, etc., he never noted the mistake, so fixed in his mind was the only child actor he ever heard of. It was not until after the operation, when he chattily informed "Mrs. Coogan" that it was funny—but he had always though of Jackie Coogan as a dark-haired boy, that the mother coldly set him straight.

What few people know is that Ruth Bryan Owen, minister to Denmark, and the daughter of the Great Commoner, is an accordion player to compare with Phil Baker, and so is her extremely beautiful daughter, Kitty Bryan Meeker. They own a ha... dozen of these wind machines.

The deepest breath you ever drew is the first one you draw in the first moment of your life. And what most of us call a nervous breakdown is usually an emotional breakdown. Has nothing to do with nerves.

It was erroneously reported (elsewhere, of course!) that in Ossining, N. Y., is a monument on the exact spot where Maj. John Andre, a British spy, was captured, a turning point in the nation.

John wasn't captured at Ossining at all, nor is the statue commemorating the spot in Ossining. It's in Tarrytown!

The next time you hear one of the smart alecks poke fun at the movie men for changing the titles of stories bought for the screen, remind him that "Alice in Wonderland" was first published as "Alice's Adventures Underground," that Thackeray's title for "Vanity Fair" was "Pencil Sketches of English Society" and that Stevenson called it "The Sea Cook" not "Treasure Island." Also—"Pride and Prejudice" was called "First Impressions" by its author and that "Pigs Is Pigs" was first known as "The Dago Pig Episode."

If this doesn't silence the aleck, ask him if he ever heard of "Old Time Legends, Together with Sketches, Experimental and Ideal." That was Hawthorne's idea of a title—but we know the book as "The Scarlet Letter." Finally, remind him that Poe originally called it "The Owl," not "The Raven."

So why laugh at the yokels?

Scallions to the Musicians' Union, which refused to allow Jules Lande's St. Regis Orchestra to play gratis for the Actors' Dinner Club reopening, though all the members were anxious to donate their services. The only concession the Union's spokesman would make was to permit Lande to appear as a soloist—with an accompanying pianist.

The Dinner Club is one of the worthier branches for the relief of hungry actors, who can't afford good meals. The Musicians' Union never has to worry about meals—their $2 weekly from each working member goes into a fund to feed their distressed men and women.

Hisssss!

There are more automobiles than bathtubs in the U. S. A.

Harold C. Burr's article on revolutionists in baseball reveals this engaging item. On the old Atlantics of Brooklyn was a little chap called Tommy Barlow. He swung a short, light stick and couldn't hit the ball very far. He had noticed how the infielders all played back for hard-driven balls. So one day he came innocently to bat, shortened his grip with the first pitch and, instead of swinging, bunted the ball down the third base foul line. The pitcher and third baseman were caught flat-footed, and Barlow sped triumphantly down to first.

But the crowd would have none of the stratagem. They hissed and booed and hung on Tommy the nickname of 'Sissy.' He became discouraged at the ridicule and soon drifted out of baseball.

"Everybody" reports a photoplay magazine "seems to have the wrong lowdown on the Rudy Vallee-Fay Webb business, including some famous columnists." Raquel Torres, who is Fay's close friend and confidante, says Rudy has telephoned her several times a week since she returned to California, asking her to make up. What very few people realize is the fact that Fay's health makes it impossible for her to remain in the damp climate of New York. Also, and obviously, there could be no night life for her. This has been the real reason for her frequent trips to California—not family quarrels—as rumor would have it."

Uh-huh.

Hearts Break In Flats at Willows

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Twenty thousand leagues from anywhere on earth a certain Ivor Novello laid the scene of a drama called "Symphony In Two Flats," which was brought down to the terrestrial plane last night by the Stage Guild out at the Willows. Not since the late lamented Bartley Campbell dramatized les Freres Grimm has anything so naive and saccharine been compounded on the Road to Mandalay.

It seems there was a composer who had married a beautiful young thing. His name was Alexander Kann and hers was Matilda Bodycombe. They go to live in the flat above a widow who is highly temperamental and who has a daughter as charming as a milk-maid from Gilbert and Sullivan. The mother's name is Annette Nosoff and the daughter was Marjorie MacQueen. Marjorie has a half-sister, Elizabeth Drake, who paints futuristic midnights and does rowing exercises to her own whistling obbligato.

Mr. Seibel

Now the composer composes a symphony to win 2,000 pound sterling in undepreciated currency. He goes blind while doing this, so his beautiful young wife and her millionaire B. F. fool him by pretending that he has won the prize. Unwarily they give him some of the prize money and he buys a radio set. On the night when his symphony is to be played, he tunes in and hears that some other symphony got the 2,000 pound sterling.

Showing what possibilities are in the Raddio as Deus ex Machina.

Meanwhile the people in the flat below have been exercising, painting, and entertaining ancient and recent beaux. They are farcically as diverting as the people upstairs are emotionally melodramatic. The bifurcated moral of the whole business appears to be that Love is Love, and Laughter is Laughter, and a revolving stage is a good thing but a train on the A. V. R. R. isn't.

This nondescript and amateurish play was presented with devout enthusiasm by the hard-working cast. The comedy of Elizabeth Drake and the simple human appeal of Helen Vrosky in a minor role deserve special praise. Alexander Kann as the composer played with sincere romanticism, while Mathilda Bodycombe had some affecting scenes as the wife. Manny Breakstone looked very Hollywoodish as the millionaire in love, while Annette Nosoff played hard for a nervous breakdown. Most of the cast, indeed, acted nobly—but "Symphony In Two Flats" should have been relegated to basement or attic instead of The Willows. It is highly diverting as a survival of the Jurassic period of Christmas pantomime. And as such the large audience seemed to appreciate it highly.

Dix Goes On Despite His Worries

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, July 18.—Despite worries over his marital separation and his father's critical illness, Richard Dix is planinng no lull in his film activities. His next picture will be "Sea Girl," a Fiji Island melodrama with scenes shot on the actual location.

Unfortunately, the thrill of the strange surroundings will be vicarious as far as Rich is concerned. His scenes will be made in Hollywood.

Background material, the authentic Fiji sequences, is being shot by the almost-forgotten George Dromgold-James B. Shackleford Expedition, which left Hollywood months ago for the South Pacific. Cables from the company indicate they'll return here in about 30 days.

Rich continues to be reticent about his marital rift. Since the trouble Mrs. Dix (the former Winifred Coe), has been staying with her parents in Los Angeles, while Rich remains in the couple's new Beverly Hills home. Ordinarily, he spends most of his time at his ranch but his father's illness has kept him close to Hollywood.

Has it been told, the story of Dorothy Parker's rebellion against a very dull week-end party in the country? One of Mrs. Parker's friends received the following wire:

"Am at John Smith's. Please send loaf of bread with file and saw inside."

* * *

The ever-restless Dorothy Lee has taken out a student's flying permit and is letting Dick Kropss teach her how to fly an airplane.

* * *

Don't know what it portends, but Joel McCrea is taking a contractor out to his ranch to see about putting up a house. It will be real pueblo style, with ladders outside.

* * *

Ann Harding is taking an interest in Carmel Myer's stage appearance for the Pasadena Community Playhouse. She has been to the theater several times to coach Carmel in reading her lines . . . Harry Green's dollar a week salary for Cecil B. DeMille was supplemented by a fat bonus, just as forecast here.

* * *

If you can believe B. P. Schulberg, the only picture that ever played as many return engagements as "She Done Him Wrong" was Theda Bara's "A Fool There Was" . . . Tom Geraghty writes that he and Douglas Fairbanks have been meeting many Hollywood friends abroad. For instance, the Alan Dwans, the Bob Sherwoods, George Marion, Sally Blane, Laurence Stallings, Lewis Milestone. They had dinner in Paris, he says, with Eleanor Boardman and Harry D'Arrast.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Wanted: A Job.

EVER WATCH a breadline? It's a morbid thing to do. You stand and stare at the naked sufferings of the less fortunate. Even in hospitals, you don't catch the note of abject despair and silent torture that you'll find in the average breadline.

In the Winter time, Times Square, in the heart of New York, presents as dramatic a show as ever has been staged in the world. The title of the offering is Bread. The audience needs no tickets; the actors do. And while Broadway scrambles and unscrambles itself in and out of theaters, the actors in this drama stamp their feet and blow on their hands while waiting hours in line for a piece of doughy bread and a mug of sweetened mud . . .

Jerome knows what it was like. He was one of them. It must have been pretty tough for a man like him. It was so obvious, just from looking at him, that life had once been very good to him.

He has a last name, this Jerome. But I wouldn't tell it, even if I knew, which I don't. He has kept his plight secret this long, and it wouldn't help either him or this story to divulge his name now.

At any rate, this dignified man played the breadlines all last Winter. At Times Square, twice a day, you might have seen a tall man with snowy hair and a sensitive mouth, take his place at the end of the line. He never wore a hat because he didn't have one. And, as hours passed, you might have noted his progress; how he moved up, inch by inch, toward the big brown truck where food could be had for nothing.

Such was his situation on the morning that he picked the newspaper out of a refuse can in the White Light sector. Idly he turned the pages over until he reached the want ad section. Less idly his eyes traveled down the columns. They stopped at a small advertisement in the fourth column.

"Wanted," it read. "Men and women of all ages and crafts for depression jobs. Call between 9 A. M. and 5 P. M. at the City Employment Agency, 55—Street. No charge."

Jerome refolded the paper and smiled at nothing at all. After all, he had tried every other means of getting a job. And he had nothing to lose by trying this one. As he was thinking, a man with whom he had spoken several times during their wait on the breadline, came near:

"Hello, Jerome," he said. "How's U. S. Steel today?"

Jerome looked up and smiled. "I'm going job hunting again," he replied. "I don't care what I land, as long as it's honest. And unless you want to read this paper, I'm going to put it to good advantage. Do you mind?"

The other man shrugged.

Jerome carefully removed one shoe after the other. Looking through them, he could see a good deal of Broadway where the soles had once been. He tore strips from the newspaper and carefully folded them. Then, just as carefully, he placed them inside of each shoe.

An hour later, he was several miles south of Times Square, walking briskly. He might have asked passersby for a nickel for subway fare, but he didn't. He might have hailed passing cars for a lift, but he knew that would be foolish. Motorists are afraid of bums.

His heart sank when he came in sight of the City Employment Agency. Evidently, every other down-and-outer in New York had seen the ad. The line extended for a full block, and around the corner. Still, with hope in his heart, he took his place at the end, and waited.

Inside the agency office, men shuffled up to rows of desks endlessly. The clerks asked a few questions, and handed each applicant a form blank.

"Fill this out, stick it in that big green box, and come back tomorrow. We may have something for you."

The words never varied. And the long line of applicants shuffled out just as they had shuffled in.

After four hours, Jerome reached the desks. The man with the glasses asked what his name was. Jerome told him.

"What was your occupation?" asked the clerk.

"Wall Street," replied Jerome. "I used to do some work down there."

"Fill this out, stick it in that big green box, and come back tomorrow. We may have something for you."

Jerome did as he was directed, and started the long trek back to Times Square and bread . . .

He came back the following day. And the day after that. And the one after that, until he despaired of ever getting a job. He was there every day faithfully. Until after a while the man with the glasses got to recognize him in the line.

"Jerome," he'd call out. "Nothing today for you. Come back tomorrow." . . .

Then the break came. He stood in line as usual one morning when he saw the man with the glasses looking at him. His heart sank. He waited for the words: "Come back tomorrow." But he didn't hear them.

"Jerome," said the clerk. "Come over here. I've got something for you."

Smiling and brushing his white hair back, Jerome left the line and walked up to the desk.

"Something for me?" he repeated. "I can't tell you how grateful—"

"Never mind that," said the man with the glasses. "I'm getting paid for this, so you don't owe me a thing. The job I have in mind isn't much, but it will keep you in food and room rent, too."

Jerome gulped. He said nothing.

"Go over to Fifth avenue," said the clerk, "to the Mid-Town Brokers Club. It's one of the most exclusive organizations in the country.

"They need a porter to clean and dust around the sitting rooms. You'll get $15 per week. Now take this card with you, and hurry up before somebody grabs it."

The clerk looked up. Jerome was not even reaching for the card.

"I'm sorry," said Jerome. "I don't want that job."

He started to walk away. The man with the glasses almost exploded.

"You don't want the job!" he yelled. "You don't want it. Who the devil are you? J. P. Morgan? Too good for a porter's job, eh? Too swell to work with your hands. That's the trouble with you bums. None of you want jobs. You want salaries, that's all.

"Well, you listen to me, Jerome. If you don't want it, you don't have to take it. There are a thousand others here who would give their right arms for that job. Imagine passing up a chance to work in the exclusive Mid-Town Brokers Club! Just imagine it!"

Jerome turned as he reached the door. All eyes were on him, and contempt could be seen in most of the glances.

"You can't possibly understand," Jerome murmured. "I happen to be a member of that club." . . .

INSULL GROUP DENIES GUILT

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—Sixteen of the 19 men indicted for use of the mails to defraud in the sale of Corporation Securities Company investments pleaded not guilty today before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Samuel Insull, Sr., who is in Greece, and Martin Insull, in Canada, have never been arrested on the warrants. Harold L. Stuart, president of Corporation Securities and of Halsey, Stuart & Co., brokerage, was called out of the city and his attorney said he would enter his plea July 31.

Charles B. Stuart, vice president, entered a plea of not guilty through his attorney, but was absent from court. All the other defendants appeared before Judge Wilkerson.

REJECT WILBUR AS GUARDIAN

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 18.—(AP.)—The suggestion that Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University and former Secretary of the Interior, be appointed a member of the board of guardians for Stanley McCormick, wealthy incompetent of nearby Montecito, was rejected in Superior Court yesterday.

Instead, the court appointed Dr. W. S. Franklin, Santa Barbara physician, to fill the place on the board held by the late Dr. William Ophuls of Stanford.

Dr. Wilbur's appointment was advocated by all members of the board except the wealthy ward's wife, Mrs. Katherine Dexter McCormick, who has been aligned against the others in a fight for change in the treatment given her husband.

TROLLEY PASS PRICE RAISED

Planned as a check on car riding by persons who obtain Sunday and holiday passes without cost to themselves, the special 25-cent all-system cards issued by the Pittsburgh Railways Company will be sold at 30 cents beginning August 13, the holder to receive a credit of five cents when purchasing another pass later.

With this announcement it was revealed that the special Sunday and holiday pass rate of 25 cents would be continued until September 24. F. R. Cogswell, traffic director, said:

"We have tacked on the extra five cents for the first purchase, to induce the purchaser to hold the ticket until another purchase, thus preventing riding by persons who obtain all the privileges without having to expend a cent."

Pastor Here Resigns For Chaplain Post

The Rev. Dr. Ira Freeman, a chaplain of the Western Pennsylvania Civilian Conservation Corps, has resigned his pastorate at the Lorenz Avenue Baptist Church, it was announced today.

The congregation voted its pastor a six months' leave of absence when he was assigned to active duty as a reserve officer in the United States Conservation Army. Dr. Freeman, however, said he did not think the arrangement fair to the church, and tendered his resignation.

Two Boy 'Cyclists Injured on Bridge

Arthur Hays, 17, of 212 Hickory street, McKees Rocks, suffered scalp lacerations when he fell after his bicycle tire caught in a car track, and his companion, Edward Tryland, 16, of 183 Hickory street, McKees Rocks, incurred similar injuries when he swerved his bicycle against an iron pole to avoid running over Hays.

The accident occurred on the ramp of the West End Bridge yesterday. Both were treated at South Side Hospital.

Bronze Church Bell Missing from Spire

MEDIA, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—A workman went up the 60-foot spire of the Lima World Tabernacle to remove a 75-pound bronze bell—and didn't find it.

The Rev. Edward L. Foote, pastor of the church, suggested someone might have removed the bell from the loft as a lark, but police said they suspected a thief intended to melt it down and sell it for old metal.

Admits Killing Pair To Get Automobile

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 18.—(Universal)—Jesse Patterson, a Negro, confessed yesterday that he planned and executed the murder of Mr. and Mrs. George Hugh Crosby June 23 on their farm near Columbus, Miss., that he might have their coupe for a trip to Birmingham.

He said he had buried their bodies in a cotton field near the house, having dug the grave the night before.

We've been talking so much lately about the debutantes-to-be, those who'll make their bows to society in the fall, that one might well inquire as to the whereabouts of the debs of yesteryear.

Many of them are out-of-town, and others are planning to go. And still others are spending the summer at home, and diverting themselves with golf and swimming, tennis and lunches, picnics and the movies, which we have always with us.

Pretty blonde Collie Jennings, a Sewickley deb of the past season, will be off soon for Murray Bay, Canada, where she'll spend the summer.

To Visit Later

Laura Childs, younger daughter of Mrs. Clinton L. Childs, expects to go visiting later on, but hasn't definitely decided on her travel plans. Laura was presented to society December 26 at a ball in the Pittsburgh Club.

Elizabeth Bredin Shaw, the Hugh Campbell Shaws' daughter, who came out at a luncheon in the Twentieth Century Club this past November, expects to limit her travels to the Chicago Fair, where she'll go with her family. But one can do a lot of traveling at the fair, we hear, with its miles and miles of exhibits.

Dorothy Blaxter, the H. Vaughn Blaxters' daughter, is out-of-town, and so are Mary Thaw Dilworth and Gretchen Rose, all three debs of the past winter. Laura Oliver is with her family in Cobourg, Canada.

At Fair In Chicago

Mary Dilworth, who is another of the many of the smart set visiting the World's Fair, plans later to become a dude rancher.

Margaret Meanor, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Meanor, of Sewickley, expects to visit friends in Massachusetts later on. Patsy Mellon's plans aren't definite yet.

Nancy Byers and Althea Robinson expect to be in town—or rather, in Sewickley Heights, the greater part of the summer. Their families, the J. Frederic Byerses and the William Christopher Robinsons, haven't gone this season to Watch Hill, R. I. Another girl staying at home is Mary Rust, a debutante of the past season, too.

* * *

Katharine MacCloskey, daughter of the James E. MacCloskeys, of Inverness street, is traveling in Canada.

Travels In Canada

Her address is Rimouski, Canada, and she'll be back, her family expects, the end of the week.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. George A. Holliday, of Andover terrace, Schenley Heights, have two nieces visiting them—Mrs. Holliday's niece, Marie-Louise Behrens, daughter of Maj. H. R. Behrens, stationed in the Philippines, and Dr. Holliday's niece, Dorothy Holliday, of El Centro, Cal.

* * *

A bit of news from Southampton, L. I.—the George C. Clarkes gave a dinner Saturday night for the Rev. Dr. Maitland Alexander, who arrived on his yacht Viator.

* * *

The T. Stockton Gaineses are away on a tour of the United States and a visit of several months in Mexico. They were married yesterday in the garden of the home of the bride's parents, the Henry C. Blackwells, of Yardley, Pa. The bride is the former Mrs. Uric Dahlgren.

Garden Wedding

The bride wore cream Alencon lace, made in the Princess style, and a large straw and organdie hat. She carried an arm bouquet of vari-colored gladioli.

Roberdeau Green Annan, of Pittsburgh, and Donald Griffin, of Lock Haven, were ushers and George Collery, of Wilmington, Del., was best man.

Mary Magee, daughter of Mrs. Rebecca J. Magee, of Edgeworth, is home from France after a year of study and travel. Mary was presented to society a few seasons ago.

Mary Dempsey Betrothed to Physician

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Dempsey, of North Highland avenue, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Dorothy Dempsey, to Dr. Charles E. Leberknight, of North Euclid avenue, at a bridge party Saturday evening.

The bride-elect is planning a fall wedding. Her fiance is a graduate of Carnegie Institute of Technology and of Johns Hopkins.

Summer Events Arranged By Peace League Members

In addition to the Scandinavian and Latin-American exhibits which the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is sponsoring tonight at "Hildesheim," Mrs. Max Henrici's home, several later summer events are being arranged by League members.

August 27 is the tentative date for a garden party and in September the president, Mrs. George Bray, will give a luncheon at her home in Church avenue, Carrick. The exhibits tonight will be shown from 7:30 until 9:30.

Miss Adrienne Doucette To Marry in Cathedral

Miss Adrienne Doucette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Doucette, has named July 26 as the date for her marriage to Warren L. Kreuger.

She will be married that day in St. Paul's Cathedral with a reception in the Pittsburgh Field Club to follow.

At-home to be Given For Marvin Sambergs

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Weiler, of Denniston avenue, will be at home tomorrow evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin S. Samberg, whose marriage was announced recently. Mrs. Samberg is the former Miss Catharine H. Weiler.

Machine Topic Of Women at Congress

CHICAGO, July 18. — (AP.) — There need be no fear of the machine, a congress of the world's best feminine minds was told yesterday, if society really has had an industrial revolution in thinking which has put emphasis on the human element.

Women from 31 countries, speaking several languages and including many of national and international achievement, attended an international congress, called by the National Council of Women.

Six-Day Meeting

For six days, this group, making what is probably the first attempt of organized women to attack world economic problems directly, will deal in general sessions and round tables with every phase of "Civilization: Our Common Cause." The women are pledged to speak frankly and practically.

The problem of the machine was tackled promptly in the first general session by Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth of Montclair, N. J., an industrial engineer, who is one of 11 women members of the American Society of Mechanical engineers. She said:

"Rightly used, the machine can help pull us out of our depression. It can eliminate drudgery, increase leisure time, furnish sufficient products for every person in the world and can be restricted so its work may best meet human needs."

She said that the new general emphasis on the finding that the producer, consumer and distributor all have common problems which they can work out better together, has put an emphasis on social welfare that should help the machine to help mankind.

Common Problems

Dr. Gilbreth, the mother of 11 children, has applied in modified form, she said, some of the efficiency methods she advocates for industry to the management of her home, which is operated on a "share the jobs" plan.

That the present depression was about to celebrate its fourth anniversary with no end in sight was the opinion expressed by Dr. Paul H. Douglas, professor of industrial relations of the University of Chicago.

Miss Margaret Bondfield, former cabinet member of Great Britain, said she was amazed at the atmosphere of hope she found everywhere in America. England, she said, sees no immediate prospect of prosperous days, but the English people are watching with keen interest President Roosevelt's program and hoping that it will succeed.

Amazed At Hope

A plea for aid in connection with problems of prostitution and illegitimacy, which she said had arisen with the adoption of monogamy in her native land, was made to the congress by Elma Ekrem, of Turkey.

In one of six round tables delegates to the congress heard Dr. Persis Putnam and other speakers discuss problems of health. Dr. Putnam, of the Rockefeller Foundation, said though improvements of the last 30 years have lengthened the average life span, childhood and youth have been the principal beneficiaries. When middle age is reached, the percentage of deaths has not been changed appreciably. The expectancy of male white children at birth is 59 years and of females 63 years.

Talks on Health

Other speakers were Dr. Mary Dabney Davis, of the federal office of education, who decried educational retrenchment, and Dr. Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, of Teachers' College, Columbia University.

College Club Lawn Dinners to Start On July 26

An innovation will be introduced at the College Club on Wednesday evening, July 26, when dinner will be served on the lawn behind the clubhouse and a program of entertainment will be given later on the terrace overlooking the lawn. The regular Thursday night dinners at the clubhouse are growing in popularity and will be continued throughout the summer.

A bridge luncheon for members and guests is scheduled for today under the chairmanship of Mrs. Clyde Stewart Rine, a member of the social committee. Both contract and duplicate will be played.

Yesterday afternoon the teachers attending summer classes at Pennsylvania College for Women held a tea, one of the many informal affairs which are making the clubhouse a constantly busy place during what is usually an inactive time, speaking "clubbily."

* * *

The Mt. Storm Community Club will hold its second pioneer jubilee at the Community Club grounds on Saturday, July 29.

The program will consist of band and orchestra concerts, male and mixed quartets, group and solo singing, boxing, shooting matches and many other attractions.

The chief feature will be a pageant depicting the second stop in the pioneer life of West Virginians, to be given at sundown, under the direction of Miss Sarah B. Huff, of the extension service of West Virginia University, assisted by Mrs. H. G. Duling.

The Allegheny Women's Club will serve home cooked meals and offer for sale many home grown products of the mountain.

Women Invited To See Puppet Preformance

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG.

Mrs. Joseph Vogt, herself a member of the Woman's City Club, has invited representatives of Parent-Teacher Associations and several local clubs to her home in Ardmore boulevard on Thursday evening to meet her sister, Miss Violet Steinberger, of Boston.

Also the guests have been asked to witness a performance of "Jimmy and Susie Go to the Circus," the engaging marionette show for which the gifted young Boston visitor has made the puppets and written the story and for which she is the puppeteer.

Two performances will be given, half the guests having been invited for 7:30 and the remainder at 9. Miss Steinberger will be assisted by Mrs. Ralph Barton Perry.

Mrs. George A. Holliday, of Andover terrace, has a rock garden that's been blooming since February! She planted snowdrops and bluebells, which came up and blossomed when the snow was still on the ground, and crocuses, which blossomed early in the spring.

Andover terrace is one of those short, closed streets tucked into the hillside of Schenley Heights, overlooking Schenley High School.

Her niece, Marie Louise Behrens, daughter of Maj. H. R. Behrens, stationed at the Philippines, took four swimming lessons at the P. A. A. pool, and yesterday swam the whole length—in her best American crawl. Her reward—a pin, and the praise of her teacher, who says she's just about the best pupil he ever had.

* * *

What happened to the debutante aides at the City Club garden party at Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock's summer place we wonder. Perhaps they were caught in the rain in town.

* * *

At the Pittsburgh Field Club, swimmers tan on the grassy lawns adjoining the swimming pool, play bridge and drink cold beer.

* * *

Swimming style note—Mrs. Charles Arrott, who swims at the Little Sewickley Creek Swimming Pool, wears one of those bathing caps marked to resemble a marcel wave.

Dr. Arthur L. Sagone To be Banquet Guest

Honoring Dr. Arthur L. Sagone, interne at St. John's Hospital and a recent graduate of the Detroit College of Medicine and Surgery, and an alumnus of the University of Pittsburgh, class of 1928, there will be a banquet this evening in the ballroom of the Roosevelt Hotel. Attorney Emanuel F. Schifano will be toastmaster.

* * *

Mrs. Rose Jones heads the hostess group for the porch party to be given Saturday afternoon at the Council House of the Pittsburgh Council of Catholic Women. Serving with Mrs. Jones will be Mrs. J. C. Sheets, Mrs. A. C. Hill, Mrs. H. Morris and Mrs. Estelle Medley.

Miss Margaret Lyle and Miss Helen George, both of Dormont, have sailed on the "Stuttgart" for Bremen, Germany. After touring Germany, they will leave for France. They expect to return Labor Day.

Tearoom Popular During Summer At City Club

The Woman's City Club tea room is a most pleasant and attractive place at all times, but particularly so on warm summer days when Mrs. E. J. Casselman, club manager, plans menus that are especially seasonable and appealing.

Day after day one sees some of the same members at luncheon in the club, among the regular noon time callers being Miss Suzanne Baetty, Judge Sara Soffel and Miss Karen Fladoes, Mrs. Berne Stenger and Mrs. W. F. Andrews, who form a congenial daily trio.

The president, Mrs. Carl Peirce, Jr., is a frequent visitor to the club and several times a week, Mrs. Edmund W. Mudge takes lunch with Mrs. Peirce in the tea room. According to custom, the club is opening the tea room to the public during July and August.

There's always afternoon tea to be had, too, with possibly one of Mrs. Casselman's own tempting and artistic sandwiches. This summer the club rooms have never been without a profusion of flowers, most of them coming from Mrs. Jennie Bradley Roessing's gardens.

LITTLE SISTER'S CLOTHES FASHIONED AFTER MOTHER'S

QUITE the nicest thing that happened this year was someone's bright idea to dress youngsters in clothes that mimic grown-up fashions. Crawling tots, just beginning to walk around on all fours, or on two wobbly feet, were promoted from baby dresses into adult fashions! The impulse spread from dresses to coats, sweater suits, bathing suits, and to beach pajamas.

* * *

IT BECAME quite a see-saw. Muslins, cambrics, organdies, plaid ginghams, flowered cotton prints, linens, piques, voiles—all these children's fabrics Mother herself, wears! This summer, the return of bicycling and roller-skating brought about the fashion for shirt-and-shorts. Young slim mothers, looking very much like their own young sons, wear exact duplicates of their knitted suits.

* * *

KNITTED things apply themselves beautifully to this fad. Turtle-necked sweaters look grand on certain women but without exception, they look so much better on youngsters. They're much more becoming to round little faces and long curls. And so those mothers who can wear them well also put matching sweaters on their boys and girls. In fact the knitted things are almost exactly the same for children as for grown-ups. The great fashion for twin sweater sets a pull-over and cardigan to match—has hit young ones too. They're really very cunning on tiny tots.

* * *

MARLENE DIETRICH helped the country-wide acceptance for mother-and-daughter clothes when she and her daughter appeared in public with duplicate grey flannel suits worn with yellow turtle-neck sweaters. This adult color combination as well as white with navy and grey with red, is smart as can be for toddlers.

* * *

PRINCESS Elizabeth of England and her little sister very seldom wear hats. They wear beautifully cut little coats and nothing but their own curls on their heads. This fashion is popular in this country too. We also see in America tiny one-year-old coats with the new broad-shouldered look—just like Mother's—with epaulets and rolls on the shoulders.

MAYOR LYSLE CANDIDATE IN M'KEESPORT

In a message to the city's voters, thanking them for their past support, Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport, yesterday announced his candidacy for re-election. Lysle has served as Mayor for 20 years, and this fall is to be opposed in the Republican primary by Dr. H. S. Arthur and John Sweeney.

In his announcement Mayor Lysle said:

"During the 20 years I have served you as Mayor, taxes throughout the nation have increased at a tremendous rate. While the boomtime of prosperity continued officials spent money at an alarming rate and when the depression arrived many cities throughout the land were found in the throes of bankruptcy.

"McKeesport also increased its taxes throughout this period, but within sane limitations that left it in a splendid comparative situation with other municipalities.

"Serving in this capacity during the past four years has been an arduous task and faithfully have I striven to meet the unusual demands. Our people have been in dire straits and it has been impossible to meet all of the demands for assistance, but I have done all within my power, aided by the members of Council, to alleviate the condition of those in distress. I have given the whole of my time to the duties of my office. The manner in which I have discharged those duties is my platform.

"Whether it applies to myself or others in like position, I say to the people of McKeesport that no class of the public service is more in need of tried and experienced servants than the government of our cities."

OFFICE SEEKERS GET PETITIONS

Petitions obtained from the County Elections Bureau yesterday brought into the political arena a candidate for Coroner, another for Sheriff, three for City Council and a number of others for Alderman.

Herman Alpern, of Alderson street, is the potential candidate for Coroner, Judd H. Bruff for Sheriff, W. J. Barnhart, of Bellevue, for Jury Commissioner, and James P. Bailey, Tenth Ward; James Pastorius, Sixteenth Ward, and John Grove, Eighth Ward, for City Council.

Those getting petitions for Alderman were Vincent Cavanaugh, Ninth; L. M. Couprand, Twenty-fifth, and W. J. Burns, Fourteenth. All are Republicans. Louis Fagan, Ninth; J. Louis Donner, Eleventh, and Roy E. Noel, Twenty-fifth, petitioned as Republicans and Democrats, and J. E. Hinish, Fifteenth Ward, as Socialist. They also are seeking aldermanic office.

Lindsay Requested To Talk at Picnic

Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, candidate for Judge of Common Pleas Court, has been asked by the Business Men's Association of the East North Side to speak at the nineteenth annual picnic of the association in West View Park.

Widow Returns With Flier's Body

SHANGHAI, China, July 18.—(AP.)—Mrs. Edward Fayette Deeds, of Kansas City, widow of Edward Deeds, an instructor in the Canton government's aviation school in Canton, arrived here today, en route homeward with the body of her husband.

Deeds was killed in Canton July 1 when he was demonstrating American military aircraft.

Candidate

CHARLES WOLFF

NORTH SIDE MAN IN COUNCIL RACE

Charles Wolff, a resident of the North Side, and prominent in mercantile circles, announced his candidacy for City Council at a meeting last night in John Morrow School.

Wolff explained that he was running as the candidate of no faction or group, but would attempt, if elected, to represent all classes. His first interest, he explained, might turn to the North Side, but that would assist him in attending to the public requirements of all the city.

J. V. Loughran, secretary of the Retail Merchants Association of Allegheny County and Mrs. Sarah Tomlinson, head of the Homemakers' Guild, were among speakers who indorsed the candidacy of Wolff.

Speaking from the platform were Judges Ralph H. Smith, Benjamin Lencher and M. A. Musmanno and Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, all candidates for the bench in the primary.

$1 MENU TEST BRINGS MUCH COMMENT

Hundreds of housewives who read the Sun-Telegraph are interested in the Prudence Penny prize dinner menu contests, by letter and telephone are commending the new idea—changing the cost of the competitive menu from $1.50 to $1. This, many say, furnishes an opportunity for the demonstration of practical thrift. One housewife said:

"I have submitted quite a few menus on the $1.50 plan, but I did it reluctantly as this is really too much money to spend on a dinner for four persons, considering the current exceptionally low prices of meats, vegetables and groceries.

"It is safe to assume that this low level is not going to maintain much longer—everything in the way of foods seems to be getting a cent or two tacked on. Yet, on Saturday I was able to buy the first and second ribs of beef at 13 cents a pound. We had it Sunday as a roast and it was one of the finest cuts of beef I have ever served. So you see the prices are still low enough to serve a fine dinner for four at $1.

"The $1.50 menus as published in the Sun-Telegraph and the shopping of hundreds of housewives have been doing in an effort to win one of the cash prizes, has really been beneficial to the woman in the home whether or not she has won a prize."

Every housewife in the reading area of the Sun-Telegraph is invited to send in her idea of an appetizing dinner menu for four persons, the cost not to exceed $1. The prize list is still $100 for this week, with $25 as the first prize. The complete rules, complete list of cash prizes and an entry blank will be found in the Sun-Telegraph today.

WATER FIRM'S STAND UPHELD

Expressing regret for its hasty action of a month ago when the borough fire plugs were ordered turned on to supply "needy" families with water, Swissvale council has sent a letter of explanation to the Pennsylvania Water Company. The letter says council had been "grossly misinformed" as to conditions and the number of families whose water had been shut off.

It had been reported to council that more than 100 families were denied a water supply, whereas subsequent investigation disclosed that only four had been affected, and of these, service had been restored to one when it was learned that sickness prevailed in the household. In the case of the other three, investigation revealed the company's action was justified.

Officials of the water company declared that nearly 2,000 families delinquent in their accounts were being "carried over" during the period of depresion.

BOYS FIRED ON, MAN HELD

Francis Gullia, 59, of 535 McDonald street, was arrested last night after, police said, he fired two shots at a group of boys near the Larimer avenue playground. The boys had been annoying him in front of his home, according to the police report.

In Gullia's possession police reported finding a .38 caliber revolver. He was charged with being a suspicious person.

Gov. Pinchot's Son Leaves Hospital

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—(AP.)—Gifford Pinchot, Jr., 17-year-old son of Gov. Pinchot, was discharged last night from a hospital where he had been confined since last Friday with a slight attack of appendicitis. No operation was performed.

World War Veteran Leaps to His Death

CALIFORNIA, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—Eura Rogers, 41, World War veteran, taken to the Washington County home last week, leaped through a screened second-floor window and died of a fractured skull. He leaves a widow and three children.

'No Taxes, No Pay,' Hoboken Tells Employes

HOBOKEN, N. J., July 18.—(INS.)—"No taxes, no pay" was the ultimatum before 50 city employes today.

The 50 were passed up when pay checks for the first half of July were passed around and Mayor B. N. McFeeley told them there would be no pay checks forthcoming until they had settled up with the city for delinquent taxes.

The 50 employes, the Mayor said, owe the city nearly $100,000 in back taxes. If the tax bills aren't settled promptly, he declared, the delinquents would be suspended until they are.

FOURTH FACES TRIAL IN KILLING

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., July 18.—(AP.)—Indicted as an accessory in the slaying of Arthur Shaw, railroader, Mrs. Myrtle Delaney will be tried in Wood County Circuit Court tomorrow.

Three others have been sentenced in what Judge F. P. Moats termed the "most horrible crime in the history of Wood County."

They are Mrs. Ida May Shaw, widow of the slain man, and Harley Lemon, her cousin, both sentenced to life imprisonment, and Eddie Crouch, sentenced to five years imprisonment as an accessory.

BOROUGH BOOKS TO BE STUDIED

Judge Ralph H. Smith has granted a consent order allowing a certified public accountant to make a survey of the minute books and vouchers of Harvey De Hass, secretary of East Pittsburgh Borough, and of the borough's account books and certificates of indebtedness.

A taxpayers' suit attacking the report of the borough auditors and seeking an outside audit was filed in Common Pleas Court recently by E. A. Stritmatter and C. J. Flasher.

Exceptions were filed by the borough authorities, but later an agreement was reached for the public accountant's survey.

Missing Nearly Year, Driver Found Slain

SHAMOKIN, Pa., July 18.—(AP.)—An 11-month search for Claude Haas, bakery truck driver, of Shamokin, has been ended unexpectedly by three boys, but police now are confronted with a difficult search for his slayer.

A fine wire drawn about his neck and a burlap bag fastened tightly over his head, the body of Haas was found yesterday by the boys while they played in a sawdust pile at an old mine stable. Haas vanished on August 30, 1932, after making collections.

POLITICS

Public Not Alone in Its Confusion

—By MARK SHIELDS—

Perhaps the public is confused over the existing political situation in Pittsburgh, and doesn't figure it is getting much clarification from columns such as these. 'nd that's natural, because the public can be no more confused than one directly in touch with politics. Probably not as much so, as the public does not have poured into its ear a mess of reports and rumors, contradictory, foggy and plain silly.

Mr. Shields.

Take the day chronologically for the desk, feet and ears of a political reporter. Something like this:

9 a. m.—Mail contains announcement of four candidates for Jury Commissioner, making a total of 52 seeking that office, paying $4,000 a year. Write about them. Somebody has to win among the 52, and all get a break in the news, though some don't rate it.

* * *

Sounds Like News, But Proves a Dud

9:30 a. m.—Telephone call from a scout that Councilman P. J. McArdle will announce for Mayor before noon. That sounds like news.

9:35—Telephone call to Mr. McArdle, who confines himself to statement his petitions are being circulated, but no formal announcement ready. So there's no news in that.

10 a. m.—Hot tip from a Grant street runner, Mr. McArdle is not to be candidate for Mayor. Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell is to be the harmony candidate against Mayor John S. Herron. James F. Malone is to run for nothing now, but to be backed for County Commissioner two years hence; William P. Witherow is to run for Council instead of Mayor, a part of the Mackrell slate; four other Councilmanic candidates are to be picked, and if they win then Mr. McArdle is to be President of Council. Retailer of these hot tidings refuses to give his name over the phone—and who can blame him?

* * *

More Likely Tips Prove Unfruitful

10:30 a. m.—Absolutely straight information that during the afternoon either Mackrell or William A. Magee will announce, following morning conference in which they are discussing which is stronger individual to make the try. This blows up when it develops Mr. Mackrell and Mr. Magee held no morning conference.

11 a. m.—Report about City Hall corridors Mr. Malone has withdrawn from the race. Mr. Malone, queried, says he is where he always was, a candidate willing to talk things over for the common good. Has not retired.

11:30—Another grapevine that ward chairmen are deserting Mayor Herron because of differences with Senator James J. Coyne, and that Twelfth Ward is in revolt.

11:45—Ward Chairman Michael DeRosa of the Twelfth appears at Mayor's office bearing petitions for the Mayor, which he has had signed in his ward. Those two reports don't jibe.

* * *

Stories of Dark Horses Prove 'Night Mares'

Noon—Everybody saying an independent group is seeking a dark horse, having been balked through the refusal of Judge Frank P. Patterson to run.

12:30 p. m.—Now everybody saying another independent group is seeking another dark horse candidate, and that there is still hope Judge Patterson will run.

1 p. m—Story that another independent group believes Judge Patterson and Mr. Mackrell were doing an Alphonse and Gaston in each urging the other to run, and that they bumped their heads bowing, and now neither will run.

1:30 p. m.—Announcements of more candidates for Sheriff, all professing to have support of veterans. All promising businesslike administration and courtesy, which is the minimum in promises.

* * *

'Bona Fide' Reports But None Agree

1:45 to 4 p. m.—All of these stories repeated in various forms by persons who have just heard them, refurbishing them as fresh stuff and positively correct. Also intimations there are to be more candidates for City Council, and that three slates will be on the ballot, as well as a group running as individuals.

GANG OF SEVEN ROBS AUTOIST IN PARK

Man Resting on Bench Seized, Carried To Dark Spot

Seven shabbily-dressed men who last night carried A. C. Trebenen, of 611 Kelly street, Wilkinsburg, from a bench in front of the conservatory in Schenley Park to a darker spot and robbed him of his cash and valuables, were sought by police today.

Thebenen left his automobile for a rest on the bench. A few minutes later seven men approached, lifted him bodily and carried him to a secluded spot near the conservatory, police said. The victim told police the thugs took $4 in cash, a watch, a stickpin and his automobile owner's and driver's cards.

Earl Ernest, attendant at a Marie Gas Company station, 2134 West Liberty avenue, was kidnaped by an armed thug who robbed him of $15 last night.

Ernest was forced into the gunman's automobile and driven eight blocks from the station, where he was ordered out after surrendering the cash. He furnished police with the license number of the car.

SUBWAY PARLEY IN 10 DAYS

A conference with officials of the Pittsburgh Railways Company on the proposed rapid transit subway to Oakland is to be arranged within a short time by a committee of City Council and the City Transit Commission.

Councilman P. J. McArdle, member of the committee, announced today that the conference will be held, probably within 10 days. An effort to have the meeting this week had been abandoned because of the absence from the city of Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company, he said.

The committee was appointed to assist the Transit Commission in learning how much the Pittsburgh Railways Company will be willing to pay toward the use of the subway and how much toward the cost of its operation.

A $6,000,000 bond issue, voted by the people for subway construction, has been untouched except for engineering expenses and efforts were recently made by Controller James P. Kerr to cancel it as a liability against the city's borrowing power.

Currants Treated With Arsenic Seized

On a complaint that they were contaminated by arsenic, 1,356 baskets of currants were seized by a deputy marshal today on order of the United States District Court.

John T. Cain, Department of Agriculture inspector, made the complaint that the fruit might be rendered harmful to health by the poison. It was said arsenic sometimes is used in spraying trees and shrubs. The currants were shipped from Marlboro, N. Y., according to the bill.

New Deal Shaken Out of Mail Bag For Postmasters

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Couple months ago we said that time will arrive when a postmaster won't lose his job for marching in the wrong parade.

Along comes President Roosevelt and jams 15,000 postal jobs into the Civil Service.

That's a fair shake and a long roll for everybody. If you make the grade nobody can plow you under.

It just about kicks the old patronage racket for the difficult outside loop.

We don't know yet whether this is a favor to the Republicans or not. The postmaster who gets his life diploma isn't likely to forget that he burst into bloom during a Democratic administration.

If it happens to work out that way it's the Republicans' own fault. They had 12 years to think of it first.

NARCOTIC FARM EXERCISES TO HONOR PORTER

Late Congressman's Efforts Led to U. S. Project

Tribute to the memory of the late Stephen G. Porter, former Pittsburgh Congressman, will mark the exercises in laying the cornerstone of the buildings of the Federal Narcotic Farm at Lexington, Ky., July 29.

The project will cost more than $3,550,000 and will be ready to house from 1,000 to 1,200 inmates early in the year 1935, it was announced by the United States Public Health Service.

As chairman of the American delegation to the League of Nations Narcotic Conference, Representative Porter worker indefatigably to check commerce in habit-forming drugs and sponsored legislation for establishing federal farms for the rehabilitation of drug addicts. The bill for the appropriation for the farm at Lexington was introduced by Porter and was approved by President Coolidge January 19, 1929. Porter died the following year and it was proposed that the farm be named in his memory.

MODEL FARM

The farm, which is situated four and one-half miles northwest of Lexington in the Kentucky blue grass region, embraces 1,056 acres. On this is being erected a group of model buildings covering an area of 650 feet square. The structures will be of brick and limestone construction and will include an administration building, dormitories, hospitals, clinics, recreation rooms and buildings to house indoor industries.

The institution will be largely self-supporting. Through the operation of the farm much of the food will be supplied and the inmates will make their own clothes. No provision will be made for women, it being found that the ratio of addicts is only one woman to four men. Any offender against the laws of the United States found to be addicted to drugs will be eligible for admission to the institution through the probation system of the Federal Courts.

NOTABLES TO ATTEND

The cornerstone exercises will be held on the afternoon of July 29 and will bring together a large number of federal officials and scientists interested in the treatment of persons afflicted by the drug habit. Clinton Thompson, chairman of the narcotic farm committee of the Lexington Association of Commerce, will be master of ceremonies.

Addresses will be delivered by Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky; Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of Kentucky University; Lawrence W. Roberts, Jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Gen. Hugh S. Cumming, Surgeon General of the United States.

COYNE FACTIONS IN COURT FEUD

As if he didn't have enough problems on his hands, Senator James J. Coyne found a factional fight waging today in his home ward, the Fourth.

The fight was touched off when Constable John S. Ridge went into court and asked that his deputy constable, Andrew Conroy, be removed from office.

Ridge complained that Conroy has repeatedly refused to help him enforce the law in the Oakland ward—in fact, Conroy has dared Ridge to have him removed, boasting he could get an appointment in another ward, the suit says.

Ridge is the gentleman who was criticized by Judge Frank P. Patterson for failing to close the Monaca Club.

But Ridge's explanation in his suit is that he couldn't get anybody to go along on raids.

Teacher Gives Party For Her Bible Class

Nearly 60 members of the Dorcan Bible Class of the German Evangelical Protestant Congregational Church, Smithfield street, will be guests of Mrs. Clara K. Apfelbach, teacher, at a garden party supper and reunion at her home, 5846 Hobart street today. There will be cards in the afternoon, supper in the lighted garden and games in the evening.

Herron Forces to Bid For Independent Aid

Weller, Church Will Play Part in 'Town Meeting'

A mixture of regularity and independence in politics will mark the "town meeting" Thursday night when Mayor John S. Herron will formally launch his campaign for romination with his followers gathered about him in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Republican City Chairman William J. Soost will be temporary chairman. He will act, however, as a member of City Council and leader of the Eleventh Ward rather than as head of the Republican city organization. In primary campaigns the party machinery is supposed to be impartial.

WELLER TO PRESIDE

Former Senator J. S. Weller is to be elected from the floor as permanent chairman. Weller is one of the bids to independence. At one time he was associated in his profession with the late Senator William Flinn.

With the presiding officers having had their say, the indorsement of Mayor Herron will be given a start by Samuel Harden Church, of Carnegie Institute, according to present plans. Mr. Church was a Roosevelt Democrat in 1932, occupying a prominent place on the speakers' stand when the President addressed a meeting in Forbes Field last summer. Mr. Church is an ardent anti-prohibitionist, and is one of the candidates on the repeal ticket for the convention to decide Pennsylvania's attitude on the proposed Twenty-first Amendment.

HERRON INDORSEMENTS

Following the indorsement of Mayor Herron, speeches will be made on behalf of Councilmen C. B. Connelley, Frank Duggan, Harry Little, W. Y. English and George S. Oliver, who will form the administration slate for the five councilmanic places to be filled.

Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar probably will get a similar indorsement for nomination, and Coroner W. J. McGregor also is expected to have official approval for another term.

CHARLES W. KELLER — JOE BALDIS

Joe, 21, 1612 St. Patrick street, with Radio Patrolmen Keller and Smith, his rescuers from the Monongahela's waters, as he was whisked away to a jail cell while police dragged the river for the body of his companion, Leo Uniatowski, 19, drowned. They leaped from the Twenty-second Street Bridge and had been drinking, police reported. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

WOMAN KILLED; GOLD SOUGHT

DETROIT, July 18.—(INS.)—Beaten, gagged and strangled to death, the body of Mrs. Josephine Swiatek, 76, was found today in the bedroom of her tiny cottage here.

Her torn clothing and the upset room gave evidence of the struggle she had made before she was choked to death by an assailant apparently bent on robbery. Neighbors told police it was common gossip around the neighborhood that Mrs. Swiatek had a large hoard of gold in the cottage.

She lived alone on the $72 monthly pension she received from the government for the death of her son in the World War.

DEATH PLUNGE 'ALL IN FUN'

The leap that two men made yesterday from the South Twenty-second Stret Bridge—one to his death—was all in fun, Joseph Baltos, 21, of 1612 St. Patrick street, testified today in South Side Police Court.

Leo Uniatowski, 19, of 1815 St. Patrick street, was drowned. Baltos was his companion in the leap. He told Magistrate Patrick F. Riley neither intended to commit suicide. He was turned over to the homicide squad for questioning.

SLEUTHS FIND FAKE 'VOTERS' ON BOOKS

37 Listed from Empty Lots, Houses; Others Unknown, They Say

County investigators are turning a list of 37 names and addresses to the Board of Revision and Assessment of Taxes today with the recommendation that they be erased from the books.

Investigations under the direction of Leo Riordan and William Windhorst, revealed, the latter declared, that the 37 were listed from vacant houses, empty lots, houseboats not along the river, or from residences where they are not known.

The majority of the "phantoms" to be stricken off are from the Twenty-second Ward, North Side.

WARNING TO RESIDENTS

Windhorst likewise warned residents of the boroughs and townships that tomorrow is the last day to see that they are properly assessed. Assessors will sit that day, and return their books the following day. Unless proper assessment is made, the citizens cannot vote, he said.

Complaints from Leetsdale and other districts that some registrars had changed voters party affiliations, Windhorst said, makes it necessary for the voter to be careful.

Those listed as "phantoms" are from poll tax assessments made recently for the coming elections, the investigator said.

One of those listed, Windhorst said, was a John Jay Burke, 363 Stratford avenue, Eighth Ward. He said a woman at that house declared no such man ever lived there.

AMONG THE 'PHANTOMS'

The list to be cut off for reasons specified includes certain persons residing at 109 Earlham street not known there; 93 Curtain street, no street in Fifteenth Ward; 601 Lenora street, registered illegally, not having lived there for one year; two persons at 4237 Duncan street, no such block on Duncan street; 2849 Penn avenue, never lived there; 3601 Bates street, 2849 Penn avenue and 2 Schomin street, never lived there; 428 Duquesne way, moved away week ago; 2000 Fifth avenue and 1409 Reedsdale street, never lived there; 307 Sandusky street and 217 Lacock street, empty houses; 112 Alcave street, no such street; 200 Stockton avenue, 110 Stockton avenue, not known there; 211 Dasher street, 11 Federal street, not known; 212 West General Robinson street, empty lots; 911 West North avenue, not known there; 403 Shore avenue, 106 East Deary street, moved away long ago; 312 East Lacock street, gasoline station, no residents; 100 East Lacock, not known; 105 Shore street, not known; 15 East Lacock street, club; 19 East Lacock, not known.

In addition, the investigator declared a number of persons had been assessed from houseboats along River avenue, but were not known.

98 POST BONDS IN VOTE FRAUD

Of the 108 politicians and members of election boards indicted by the federal grand jury in the election fraud probe, 98 have voluntarily surrendered to United States Marshal Walter W. Meyer and furnished bonds for their appearance in court.

Counsel for some others have advised the marshal their clients will give bonds within a few days.

Among those furnishing bonds yesterday were State Senator James J. Coyne and Patrick J. O'Malley, Republican chairman in the Second Ward. Their bonds were for the second indictment against them, which supersedes the first true bill in which they and seven others were named.

Others furnishing bonds then were Frank Miller, police captain in Stowe Township; Robert S. S. Haus, of Mt. Lebanon, and Attorney John J. McGrath.

Those who gave bond today were August Weisser, William Schwartz, Stanley Carlowski, Floyd Kawaka and Earl Longo.

Nettie, 'Missing,' Shuns Gas Station Hearing

Nettie Gordon, who objects to her new neighbors, the Vacuum Oil Company, yesterday failed for the second time to appear in court to press her "nuisance" charges at an injunction hearing before Judge James H. Gray.

Subpena servers, it was said, were unable to find her.

Nettie and two other plaintiffs, Joseph S. Corriols, Spanish vice consul, and Joseph H. Duty, started the injunction suit against the oil company to prevent it from building a gasoline station near their properties in Perrysville avenue and Legion street.

To charges that the station would endanger the lives of 400 pupils of the McNaugher School who pass the site daily, Dr. W. W. Deshong, school principal, answered:

"I shouldn't say the station would increase the hazard appreciably."

George V. Swinderman, general manager for the Vacuum company, said the station would be modern and that there would be no fumes or noise from mechanical equipment.

Burgess William Turner, of Wilkinsburg, testified that he lives near to a gas station and could find no objections to it.

Final arguments in the case will be heard Monday.

CLOSED BANKS' HEADS BLAMED FOR DELAYS

Delays in reopening unlicensed state banks are due to laziness and inefficiency on the part of the bank officers rather than to negligence by the state banking department, James C. Chaplin, president of the Colonial Trust Company, declared today.

Mr. Chaplin pointed out that the banking department would be making a serious mistake if it licensed institutions to reopen when they were not in a position to insure their continuous operation with adequate liquidity.

The unlicensed banks did not measure up to this standard, according to Mr. Chaplin. The rise in security values, he said, has improved their position to some extent, but a major portion of the assets of unlicensed state banks is in mortgages which, while they may be good, cannot be liquidated.

MORE CAPITAL NEEDED

To permit the reopening of these banks it will be necessary for managements to get additional capital or to make arrangements for the liquidation of frozen portions of their assets, Mr. Chaplin declared.

"Most of the men controlling these banks have done nothing to bring their organizations into a sufficiently liquid position to permit reopening. They have been content to sit back and wait for the banking department to solve their troubles.

"Either through lack of sufficient experience as to how to proceed or through mere mental inertia, little progress has been made in preparing unlicensed state banks to reopen except in a few cases."

SOME OFFER PLANS

Mr. Chaplin said reasonable plans for the reopening of some banks had been submitted to the banking department, but that in the majority of cases no satisfactory proposals had been made.

Another difficulty in the way of reopening, according to Mr. Chaplin, is that men who got their banks into frozen conditions now expect the banking department to allow them to remain in control.

Mr. Chaplin continued:

"Many of the men in the banking business were never qualified by experience or natural ability to be bankers. Now they cannot expect to be left in control of the institutions that they have gotten into trouble."

Mortgages, he said, may be good, but there is no market for them and no way to convert them into cash to meet abnormal demands of depositors.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation, he continued, may offer a way out for some institutions, but no one knows what the market value will be for the bonds the corporation proposes to exchange for mortgages.

In conclusion Mr. Chaplin emphasized that to reopen any unlicensed bank it will be necessary for officials or leading stockholders to work out a plan to put the institution in a liquid condition, to obtain the approval of the banking department and then to get back of the plan and put it across with the stockholders and depositors.

RELIEF LABOR TO BE WATCHED

Councilman Charles Anderson promises to watch closely work done by men employed by the city on relief projects as a result of disclosure that the jobs frequently are handed out on the basis of the recipient's ability to deliver votes to the Herron-Coyne element at the primary election, Anderson declared.

"I intend to look around and see where they're working."

Councilman W. Y. English, the Mayor's leader in Council, said the relief work program should not be criticized before the work is carried out.

City Council's finance committee today was to discuss appropriations totaling $115,000 for direct relief.

One ordinance provides for an appropriation of $50,000 from welfare relief bonds to buy shoes for the needy. Another provides $15,000 for medicines for relief cases. The third authorizes a $50,000 appropriation to pay lying-in expenses of women without sufficient funds.

6 U. S. Inspectors War on Beetle Here

Considering Pittsburgh as the western front in the Department of Agriculture's offensive against the Japanese beetle, six federal inspectors are in this city inspecting food stuffs and produce.

A night and day shift is maintained at the produce yards, near Twenty-third street, while all postal matter is being rigidly inspected.

'NUMBERS' RAID BRINGS ARREST

An alleged "pick-up" man for a North Side numbers lottery was at liberty in $2,500 bond today following his arrest yesterday by county detectives who investigated complaints that wards of Juvenile Court were among the customers of beer retailers and numbers writers.

Released on bond by Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan, the suspect said he was Michael U, of 1014 Constance street. He insisted there was only one letter to his surname.

He was arrested in a raid on a Lowrie street dwelling, where numbers writers were said to deposit their daily collections with a woman.

Reports that a beergarden owner in the Hill district and one in Beltzhoover were selling beer to minors proved groundless, the detectives said.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

If You Want Friends Learn To Be Generous and Gay

Remember when you were a kid, and thought all the world was picking on you?

Dolly's that way now, and she can't imagine what's wrong. Wrong with her? No. Wrong with other people, of course.

And she wants us to give her a hand, because no one else will.

Can you guess the answer?

Dear Miss Robinson:

I am a girl and am in need of someone's advice. I know you have helped a lot of other people, so I am coming to you, hoping that you can help me.

I am very unhappy. I am 17, and am tall and fair. I am not bad looking, but I am not popular. I go to dances and parties, but no one seems to notice me. No young men ask me to dance, and that makes me feel very much hurt.

On the other hand, when my sister goes to a dance she is very popular. Everybody flocks around her and makes a fuss over her. They seem to want to be nice to her. Can you tell me why they treat me so differently? Why is it that folks don't seem to care to be friends with me?

WANTS FRIENDS

Even at home everyone is against me. No one sticks up for me. I am working and trying to do everything the best I can, but everyone seems to have something to say about me.

Can you tell me why people are like this? What is wrong with them? I long for friends, but I just can't seem to get any, no matter how anxious I am.

Please help me, because the way things are, I am simply wretched. DOLLY.

Why don't people give you any attention?

Let's reverse the question, youngster—and maybe we'll find the answer.

What sort of attention do you give other people?

Do you help other people to feel happier, more excited, surer of themselves? Do you flatter them, comfort them, tease them a bit, make their lives a gayer adventure because you've dropped around?

Or do you just make them think of Dolly and Dolly's deep, dark despair?

FIND NEW INTERESTS

Are your own timidity, resentment, suspicion and discouragement so plain that people who are looking for a good time side-step your gloom? And who could blame them? Why should they make their lives harder by taking your load? And why should you expect them to?

"But how can I help that, when I'm so worried about myself?" you wail.

Stop worrying about yourself—by getting interested in something else. Start taking a little real interest in these people you wish to attract. Start seeing if you can't do something for them, instead of indignantly demanding that they do something for you.

People are the greatest adventures on earth, Dolly. Quit envying your sister, and begin to take part in that adventure, as she does. Learn to be generous, gay and human. Stop expecting and begin giving. And before you know it, you'll have friends galore.

Fay King Writes of Mary Pickford's and Doug's Titled Friends

MARY PICKFORD REIGNED SUPREME
THE MOVIE FANS ADORED THE LITTLE BLONDE WITH THE LONG CURLS AND POUT
HER PUBLIC WAS A LITTLE SHOCKED WHEN SHE MARRIED DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS
FAY KING

By FAY KING.

The Pickford-Fairbanks separation news brings many memories to older movie fans.

No other star was ever placed on such a pedestal of public approval as this girl with the long golden curls and the wistful little pout. Mary became the very symbol of perfection.

When her romance with Fairbanks was first rumored, her public would not believe it. Mary had a husband, Doug had a wife and young son.

When they were both divorced they still denied their romance, so that it was somewhat of a shock when they suddenly married.

If this is really the end, Mary could not have made her confession at a shrewder time. Doug's titled friends will resent this publicity while he is their guest.

And perhaps Mary intended that they should!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Anthrax, Once Common, Rarely Encountered Now

Much progress has been made in the prevention and cure of certain industrial diseases. Great loss of life and permanent physical disability have been reduced to the minimum. For example, "wool-sorters' disease," also known as "anthrax," is now a rare industrial disease.

Dr. Copeland

At one time anthrax was a common ailment contracted through the handling of skins, hair or diseased animals. It was frequently encountered among workers in the hide, hair, bristle, wool, horn and bone industries. Occasionally, it was seen in butchers, veterinarians and farm laborers.

The disease is caused by a germ called the "bacillus anthracis." This germ is found in diseased animals and is easily transmitted to humans. The infection may be contracted through the skin, lungs or digestive tract.

Anthrax of the skin is the most common form. The infection usually enters through slight abrasions, scratches or small wounds located on the forearm, hand, neck or face. In butchers or persons who carry infected meat or hides, the infection is apt to afflict the neck and shoulders.

When neglected the disease may prove fatal. Fortunately, the law now requires adequate protection for men engaged in industries where anthrax infection may occur. It demands disinfection of all raw materials in those trades in which horsehair, hides, wool and other similar substances are used.

Workers in leather tanneries, and hair and wool factories, are now protected by the use of rubber gloves and rubber aprons. Proper ventilation is provided to carry off the dust where hair and wool are handled. This is especially important around carding machines. In addition, the refuse from tanneries and woolen mills is properly disposed of and does not become a menace to the community.

I often receive inquiries concerning the safety of using hair shaving brushes. It is true that at one time the hair used for shaving and lather brushes was a source of danger. Too often these brushes harbored the germs and spores of anthrax.

I am glad to say that the requirements of the United States government and of local health officials call for scientific disinfection of hair used for these brushes. This is accomplished by boiling the hair or bristles for not less than three hours, or by exposing them to steam under 15 pounds pressure for 30 minutes, or by exposure to streaming steam for not less than six hours.

You can be assured of the safety of your shaving brush by looking for the name or the trade mark of the manufacturer. If the brush does not bear a name or trade mark do not purchase it. If in doubt about the brush, sterilize it for four hours in a 10 per cent formaldehyde solution.

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

News Item Throws Some Light on Veritzen's Plan

My face must have betrayed my astonishment at Lillian's answer to my worried comment upon Mary. She chuckled as she crossed to the table and picked up a copy of the morning paper.

"Have you read the foreign dispatches today? I don't mean the big one, but the small paragraphs of gossip?" she asked.

"No, I haven't. My head began to ache before I finished the first page, and I put it aside and never did pick it up again."

"Then no wonder you think I'm dealing in witchcraft when I jump to the conclusion that old Phil is the reason for your yen over Mary. Nay, nay, old dear; I haven't the sign of a broomstick about me. Just read this, and you'll see why I brought the gifted Mr. Veritzen's name into our conversation."

"You mean he's mentioned in here" I asked, as I took the paper from her hand and looked at the column she indicated.

"Nary a mention," she said, smiling. "But if you'll read what is said, you may get some clue to whatever is puzzling you about Mary."

I bent my eyes to the column she had indicated. It was a letter of Paris social gossip about personages high in rank and position, and one name flashed out at me as if it had been written in letters of fire. The letter read:

READS STORY

"King Georges of Trees is expected to make quite an extended visit to Paris in about a month. He is coming incognito as usual, and though the reason for his present visit is the necessity for continued surgical treatment for the injuries received in a motor car accident here last summer, smart hostesses are already in tense rivalry for his necessarily few social appearances.

"This visit has revived the rumors concerning the projected marriage of King Georges to the Princess Olina of Transvania. When the betrothal was announced it was expected that the wedding would shortly follow. At that time Georges was the heir to the throne, and the sudden death of his uncle, which brought him to the throne, plunged the court into mourning and delayed the nuptials.

"The unfortunate motor accident to King Georges was another reason for delay, but now there is divided opinion among the gossips, some asserting that Princess Olina is preparing her trousseau, and others being equally positive that the match is being broken off.

"All this, of course, has only enhanced the interest which will surround the visit of the King, who, it is believed, will use the name Baron Venitos for his incognito. It is one which he has used upon other visits to Paris and London.

VERITZEN'S SCHEME

"The young king is one of the most attractive royal figures in Europe. Tall, handsome, charming and of keen mind, he is exceedingly popular in more than one cross section of Parisian life. One thing is certain. Any hint of delay in his nuptials will be hailed with joy by thousands of his feminine admirers, those who know him personally and those who know and admire only his photographs."

I read the chatty account through, then went back to the beginning and re-read it. When I laid it down and looked up, I found Lillian's eyes studying me quizzically.

"Am I wrong in thinking it throws some light upon whatever is troubling you concerning Mary?" she asked.

"Indeed it does," I answered, and was conscious that my voice was trembling with fury. "That old—" I choked and stopped.

"I gather," Lillian said airily, "that any further words would have to be 'deleted by censor.' But it does not take a supreme court justice to deduce that you are referring to that eminent dramatic producer, great gentlemen and no-good-stiff, Philip Veritzen."

"Thank you for the last epithet," I said, faintly smiling. "He has just told Mary that she must start for Paris in three weeks' time, for a year's study."

"The condemned old fox!" Lillian said vehemently. "Don't you see his scheme?"

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Question of Ethics

As most Bridge players know, it is a custom in Eastern Duplicate games where the Mitchell Movement is used, to seat the stronger players North and South and the weak players East and West. This practice has raised in the mind of Mr. Milton Unger, of Boston, a question of ethics, which he submitted to me. It is:

"Is it fair for North and South to take advantage of 'weak' East and West players?"

By "taking advantage" I assume that Mr. Unger means using to the utmost superior skill in bidding and play. Of course, if he means to give the phrase any other meaning, such as the use of private conventions, the answer must be that it is unfair to take advantage of either a weak or a strong pair in that manner. However, if all he means to ask is whether or not players are entitled to overbid because they feel that their opponents will not take full advantage of the strength of their hands or because they feel quite sure opponents will not double and they will escape with a paying penalty, then the answer is that they certainly are. In fact, in my opinion most good Bridge players overbid with the full expectation that every once in a while opponents, however strong, will "slop" a trick on the defense.

To give point to his question, Mr. Unger cites a specific case: Playing at the new popular club in Boston, he and his partner, Mr. Jerry Farrar, had reached the point where they needed a few tops, so decided that the oncoming East and West pair, reputed to be the weakest in the room, should help them out. Here was the deal:

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ Q 8 7 6 ♡ A 10 9 8 5 ◇ 10 8 2 ♣ 4
♠ 4 3 ♡ Q 7 6 ◇ Q J 5 4 ♣ K Q J 8	North West East South	♠ J 2 ♡ K J ◇ A K 6 3 ♣ 10 9 7 6 5
	♠ A K 10 9 5 ♡ 4 3 2 ◇ 9 7 ♣ A 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Of course, the hand has been overbid. East and West, with proper play, can cash two diamond tricks and two hearts, and thus defeat the contract.

Actually, Mr. Unger was fortunate enough to make it. West opened with the club King. South won with the Ace, and ruffed a club in the Dummy. A small spade was then led and won by the Declarer, and the remaining club ruffed. A small heart was now led and East played the King. East then laid down the King and Ace of diamonds, and then, although West echoed, decided to shorten South's trump holding and returned a club, which permitted South to discard the remaining losing heart in his own hand and ruff with the last trump in Dummy, thus fulfilling a contract which should have been defeated.

In my opinion, Mr. Unger and his partner were taking advantage of nobody but themselves. The East and West players were responsible for the making of a contract that should have been defeated, even granting that it might reasonably have been bid.

TODAY'S QUESTION

North-South vulnerable.
The bidding:

North	South
1 ♡	2 ♡

You, North, hold:
♠ Q 10 5 ♡ A J 10 9 6 4 ◇ A 8 3 ♣ 2

What do you bid?

Answer: Three hearts. Do not leap to four, for if South has a minimum two-heart bid, there will be no play for four whatsoever. The bid of three hearts tells South to bid four if he has a good two-heart bid and not a shaded or minimum Raise.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Their Privilege

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married soon and I would like to know whether or not it is a matter of form to address my future mother and father-in-law as "Mother" and "Dad," or is it just a matter of taste? P.

This is a question that must be agreed on by all four people concerned. First talk it over with your fiance . . . he will talk it over with his parents, or perhaps has talked it over with his parents. And it is really they who make the decision. If they are cordial people, if the relationship is as ideal as I am sure it is, I am sure that they will wish to have you call them "Mother" and "Dad." Sometimes the parents-in-law prefer the form "Mother Wood" and "Father Wood." But it isn't your privilege to adopt either of these names, or any other name, until THEY have suggested or approved your choice. And it will be very easy to talk it over with them.

Sport Dance Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to a sport dance. Would it be correct to wear a white flat crepe sports dress with a colored flat crepe jacket and all white accessories? Should the hat and gloves be kept on while dancing? Or should I wear something a bit more formal? Z.

Since the dance is designated as a sports dance, it would seem appropriate for you to wear the white crepe sports dress with the colored flat crepe jacket and the white accessories. Don't keep your gloves on while you are dancing. Wear your hat.

LEHMAN FLAYS 'GHOULISH' ACT OF HITLER

The recent order of Chancellor Hitler that the ashes of Jews buried in communal cemeteries in Germany must be removed, was condemned by Leo Lehman in a radio address from station WJAS broadcast in behalf of the Pittsburgh phase of the $2,000,000 fund for the needy Jews of Germany.

Thirty-two teams, both men and women, started solicitation of funds yesterday and will make their first reports tomorrow at a luncheon in the William Penn Hotel.

EVEN DEAD OUSTED

Mr. Lehman, who is general chairman of the campaign, in his address said:

"Hitler wants the living Jew to die; he will not permit the dead Jew to rest in peace. What manner of ghoul is this who must desecrate the graves of the dead, not satisfied with torturing, humiliating and killing the living?"

DESCRIBES VISIT

The speaker described a visit to Germany and added:

"If Hitlerism is to be typical of the Germany I have cherished in my heart for years and wish to cherish, I cannot but bring myself to realize that my love for Germany will be unmerited. However, theory must give way to fact; sentiment to reality.

"I feel that the situation is clearly understood now; that Pittsburgh will appreciate the circumstances of those unfortunate men and women and children in Germany and will contribute generously to alleviate their suffering."

Louis Caplan, vice chairman of the campaign, and Mrs. Saul Lavine, woman's chairman, will speak at the luncheon tomorrow.

Bird Benefactor Held for Illegal Possession

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 18.—Several weeks ago Foster Lewis, Evansville businessman, found in his back yard a redbird with a broken leg. He carried the bird into his home, mended its broken limb, and fed and nursed it.

The bird became attached to its benefactor and followed him about.

Edwin W. Alson, Evansville Deputy game warden, heard about Lewis and his redbird and obtained a warrant charging Lewis with "illegal possession of a redbird in violation of section 6 of the migratory bird act."

Lewis pleaded guilty yesterday before United States Commisisoner Robert C. Enlow, and was held under bond of $250.

FIGHT TO OUST MAYOR HOAN

MILWAUKEE, July 18.—(AP.)—After being mayor of Milwaukee 17 years Daniel W. Hoan, Socialist leader, today faced a recall fight.

The "Recall Council," an organization new in Milwaukee politics, opened downtown offices yesterday and started circulation of recall petitions.

The Mayor professed to be unconcerned by the efforts to unseat him.

The opposition to the Mayor was consolidated by the Milwaukee Real Estate Board which for several years has striven to reduce city taxes. Officials of the board clashed with the Mayor because of his determination to hold salaries of city employees at their old levels. Salaries finally were reduced, but savings were diverted into a city unemployment fund instead of being applied to a reduction in taxation.

Capone Aide Denies He Was Slain, Buried

CHICAGO, July 18.—(INS.)—"Machine Gun" Jack McGurn, handyman for Al Capone during the gang chief's heyday, was busy today denying that he was put on the "spot" by his foes while shooting a round of golf.

McGurn's absence from his favorite haunts lent credence to the report that he was shot down and his body carried away and buried in a secluded section. But Jack, attired in golf togs, appeared suddenly at his home and put a stop to the story.

LEGS OF JACK LOVELOCK (RIGHT) AND BILL BOTHRON SETTING RECORD

The greatest mile race ever run featured the annual dual track and field meet between combined teams of Princeton-Cornell and Oxford-Cambridge at Princeton when both Jack Lovelock, Oxford medical student, and Bill Bothron, of Princton, beat Jules Ladoumegue's old mark of 4:09.2. Lovelock had beaten the record a week before in a meet with the Yale-Harvard team.

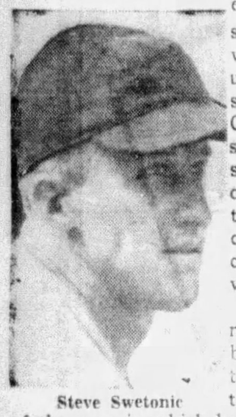
SLAB BRACE TIMELY FOR GIANT GAMES

ASIDE FROM THE substantial gain it represented in the pennant race, the capture of yesterday's double-header by the Pirates was particularly pleasing and encouraging as continued evidence that the local pitching staff is swinging back into stride just at a time when its full strength is needed more urgently than at any other stage of the season. Those six games with the Giants in four days, starting tomorrow, spell the toughest and most important series of the campaign so far, and the outcome could not have been otherwise than disastrous if the Bucs had been compelled to go into it with the slab corps in its erratic form of the last few weeks.



Steve Swetonic

Prior to yesterday, Bill Swift had not won a game since June 24 and had been lifted in two starts in the meantime. Steve Swetonic, who hurled his third shutout and the second full game of the year in which he did not give a base on balls, had not tasted victory since June 28 and had failed twice to go the distance. Their return to form just before the big series that may make or break Pittsburgh's pennant chance is most opportune.

Four Pittsburgh pitchers in succession went the route in the winning of three of the last four games up to today, Hal Smith and Larry French preceding Swift and Swetonic. That equalled the staff's best record for the year. It was the fourth time that four straight games had been completed by the starting pitchers, giving Leon Chagnon today a chance to set a new mark of five.

Incidentally, Manager Gibson was sticking to the form sheets in picking Swift, Swetonic and Chagnon for the three games against Brooklyn. None of them had lost a decision to the Dodgers this season, and seven of the eight victories scored over Max Carey's club up to today were cerdited to this trio, three to Swift and two each to Swetonic and Chagnon. Heinie Meine pitched the other success.

THE REPORT THAT it was a sore shoulder that caused Charley Ruffing to lose his effectiveness for a long time this season, and that he chose to conceal the fact and let Joe McCarthy keep on starting him when he was a mere gamble instead of the always dependable hurler he was in 1932, has demonstrated again that ball players sometimes hurt themselves and their clubs through a mistaken sense of duty.

It is recalled that John McGraw once pointed out, in the case of Pitcher Joe Genewich, that there is such a thing as a player's being too game. Genewich had a bad shoulder, but refused to ask for a rest for fear McGraw would think he was stalling. Consequently, McGraw, ignorant of the true state of affairs, continued calling on him to pitch. Joe couldn't win, the condition of his shoulder went from bad to worse, and the Giants suffered.

SIMILAR MISTAKES HAVE been made by many other players, particularly youngsters trying to establish themselves as big league fixtures in the early part of the season. They hide injuries, through fear that they will be viewed as lacking gameness if they complain, and that they may lose a chance to make good in the majors.

The result is that the managers continue to use them, when the ailing players ought to be resting up and taking treatment. It only makes matters worse, there is a danger of permanent injury, and meanwhile, because of unfit starters, the club loses ball games that might have been won with different men.

NO DISABLED REGULAR can be as valuable to his club in a game as a substitute who is sound and healthy. The difference in natural playing ability is more than offset by the difference in physical condition. A player who conceals injury or illness for the sake of staying in the lineup is not dealing fairly with either himself or his club. Long continuous playing streaks involve similar dangers. A player who has taken part in a long string of games without a miss is apt to stick to his post when not fit, just for the sake of keeping his record from being interrupted. He may only aggravate the injury and cause the loss of ball games. Continuous playing streaks are the bunk, anyhow. They are the most worthless records in baseball. They don't mean a thing, and a player trying to keep such a record from being halted is doing his club an injustice when he stays in the game while unfit to do his best work. Babe Ruth was spouting more than mere words when he remarked recently that every ball player ought to be given a couple of days' rest about every two months.

Ossie Bluege

ONE OF THE baseball theories of Clark Griffith is that when a champion club fails to come through with another pennant in two years, the time has arrived to tear it apart and build up a new team. Griffith surely has carried out that reconstruction policy in the handling of his Washington club.

Of all the players who had a hand in the winning of the last Washington pennant in 1925, and who took part in the world series against the Pirates that fall, only four remain

If the mountain won't come to Teddy Yarosz, Monaca's gift to boxing, Teddy will go to the mountain, or if the folks in New Castle won't deliver coal in his back yard he'll carry coals to New Castle.

That may be mixing up things a bit, but you'll gather the drift when we inform you that Yarosz is boxing Freddie Polo, of Newark, N. J., in the latter's home town next Monday night. That was the night he was to meet Vince Dundee, also of Newark, at Forbes Field, but Dundee came up with a bad ankle and asked for a postponement, and, as a result of the attendant publicity, a live-wire Newark promoter has jumped in with a sizable guarantee and lured Teddy to Newark, where the Dundee folks can see him.

SOUTHPAW PRACTICE

In meeting Polo, Teddy is taking on no part of a sucker. Freddie is a southpaw and a good puncher who has had a lot of seasoning against the tough ones. He may give Yarosz a lot of trouble, but Teddy is looking ahead to future business. He is certain to fight Lou Brouillard either here or in Boston at an early date, and Lou, who recently shellacked Mickey Walker and holds a decisive victory over Jimmy McLarnin, also is a wrongsider, and Teddy will be able to do some practicing in the art of fighting a southpaw in the Polo match. Then, too, he'll get a lot of publicity in the New York papers fighting Polo in Newark, close by, and that's not an item to be lightly regarded.

Teddy also has an offer for a

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE EVER-PRESENT COPPER PIN—Senor Elias Jimenez, who is a member of the Municipal police force of Trinidad, Cuba, has constantly carried a copper pin under his tongue for the last 28 years. He does not remove the pin before retiring, or eating, drinking, nor at any time whatsoever. If during his sleep the pin accidentally dislodges itself it awakens Senor Jimenez, who must replace it under his tongue in order to be able to fall asleep again. THE DEAD MAN'S HEAD—This curious natural phenomenon, which can be seen in the Bay of Cienfuegos, Cuba, either in the city or even from the ocean at a great distance, is a mountain peak about 3,000 feet high and belongs to the mountain group of Sancti Spiritu. The profile of the Dead Head is perfect in every detail, including the Adam's apple.

TOMORROW: A DEAF MAN'S GREATEST TRIUMPH.

BUCCOS DEFEAT BROOKLYN IN DUAL BILL

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Prosperity and the Giants are reaching Pittsburgh on the same train and Good Times are ahead for the Pirates, provided they are able to take advantage of the golden opportunity presented. The Bucs are ready to repel the invasion of Bill Terry's men, who are slated to lay a six-game seige of Forbes Field, beginning tomorrow.

By winning twice over the Dodgers yesterday, the Pirates climbed within four games of the idle Giants and came within a few percentage points of vaulting into second place over the Cubs, who also had a day of rest. The impending clashes with the Giants may have a distinctive influence on the hot pennant race now featuring the Heydler circuit.

The flag-bearing fireworks will be set off with a doubleheader tomorrow afternoon. Single games will be played Thursday and Friday, the climax to be capped Saturday in another doubledecker.

The Pirates made 16 hits in each of their engagements with the Dodgers yesterday. Bill Swift and Steve Swetonic each held the enemy to seven blows in the two battles. Bill Swift registered his tenth victory of the year in the opener, while Swetonic, copping the nightcap, rang up his third shutout success of the campaign, despite his unimpressive card for the year. The scores were 14-2 and 7-0.

The Bucs treated the fans to another banner round in the eighth inning of the first fight. They reeled off nine runs and eight hits, mostly at the expense of Southpaw Fred Heimach. Paul Waner's triple with three on the sacks was the big punch of the inning.

Pie Traynor and Arky Vaughan passed the century mark in hits yesterday. Pie made six hits in the two games to send his total to 103. Vaughan, with three blows in the second clash, reached 102 safeties. Fred Lindstrom came out of the dual fight with five hits, including three doubles.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

Nick Altrock to the Brownies any good.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—We've been entertaining those St. Louis Browns the last few days and I can't figure what keeps 'em down so low. But I guess all St. Louis players are natural-born gophers. Just as soon as they see a hole, they jump into it. And so far this new National Recovery Act hasn't seemed to do the Brownies any good.

Honestly, they have enough fight to outfit a carload of wildcats. But every year they settle toward the bottom like a scuttled alligator. They ain't exactly carbolic acid to our Washington club, but, on the other hand, they ain't Mary Garden's perfume, either. I could name three teams higher in the standing we'd rather meet than St. Louis. I could also name seven other towns in the league I'd rather play in. That is, excluding the St. Louis beer.

Now ain't that just like your old Uncle Nicholas! I start talking about the Brownies and end up chipping about beer. Oh, well, they both have about the same percentage.

match with Young Terry in Cleveland on August 8, but is holding off on it until after he finds out when Dundee will be able to go through with his contract to meet him here. Manager Max Waxman has promised to let Promoter John Hernon know by tomorrow when Dundee will be able to resume training.

BUTCH BEATS FIELDS

Poor matchmaking spoiled the card of 10 four-rounders which drew a handful of fans to Hickey Park, Millvale, last night, the work of some of the novices pitted against seasoned performers being pitiful in the extreme. If any more unknowns are paired off here the authorities should make sure they can hold up their hands and have at least a little idea of what it is all about, to prevent any more such onesided mismatches and possible serious injuries.

Mose Butch, local featherweight, flashed a return to form in beating Ross Fields, of Cleveland, rival southpaw, in the main event, evening the score for a defeat at the Arena last winter.

Patsy Hennigan, Clairton lightweight, won a referee's decision over Steve Senich, of Homestead; Nat Litfin, Hill featherweight, hammered Young Dixon, Negro substitute for Harry Lennox, through four rounds, but couldn't floor him; Andy Kosel, of Turtle Creek, came from behind to beat Johnny Woods, local Negro featherweight, but Woods got the decision; Harry Jacoby, local middleweight, knocked out Steve Furlick, of Pitcairn, an utter tyro, in less than a minute and a half, flooring him twice, and Al Gatchel, Cleveland heavyweight, chased Jack Terrill, local Negro, all around the ring and won handily.

RISKE IS WINNER

In other bouts, Johnny Birek, local lightweight, stopped Eddie Shenn, of Turtle Creek, with body punches in the second round after trailing from the start; Cuddy Turner, of Turtle Creek, was knocked out sitting down in the first round by Joey Zelano, North Side bantam, who completely outclassed him; Johnny Riske, South Hills middleweight, outpunched Mike Bazzone, of McKeesport, for a referee's decision, and Kid Sterling, Negro featherweight, making his professional debut, looked good in beating Sammy Paris, of the Hill, in the four-round opener.

Sunny Jim McVey and Charley Belanger box the windup at Hickey Park next Monday night. Nat Litfin and Petey Sarron were paired for another 10-rounder, but a change may be made in this bout.

Fight Results

At Hickey Park, Millvale—Mose Butch defeated Ross Fields in main bout of 10 fourlrounders. (See fight story for other results.)

At Louisville, Ky.—Jackie Pilkington and Lou Terry drew, 10 rounds; Johnny Miles won by technical knockout over Ollie Joyner, 2 rounds.

At Pottsville, Pa.—Johnny Haystack and Kid Snooks drew, 6 rounds; Midget Cook defeated Joe Strauges, 6 rounds; Billy Zeigler and Eddie Petusky drew, 6 rounds; Jimmy McLarnin defeated Charley Bokus, 6 rounds; Danny Devlin defeated Pat Igo, 6 rounds.

At West Springfield, Mass.—Unknown Winston won by technical knockout over Adolph Heuser, 12 rounds; Jack Van Noy defeated Al Borros, 8 rounds.

At Jersey City—Harry Carlton and Lou Lombardi drew, 10 rounds; Bucky Keyes and Happy Nanolitano drew, 8 rounds.

At Terre Haute—Sammy Slaughter defeated Roy Williams, 10 rounds; Roy Mitchell knocked out Andy Di Vodi, 2 rounds; Santos Delgado defeated Garfield Rice, 10 rounds.

At New York—Westy Dawson and Gene Demonte drew, 4 rounds; Pete Higgins-Frank Gregory bout called "no contest," 1 round.

COCHRANS PLAY HOMEWOOD IN LEAGUE GAME

The Cochran Club, of Pleasant Valley, plays Homewood in the feature game of the City League schedule this evening at the Homewood playgrounds. Both clubs recently have strengthened their clubs for the second-half race.

In the other league game, Dormont will meet the Brentwood Gillespies.

Regis Leheny, of Oakland, signed last night with the Parmelee Club in the Greater Pittsburgh League, and will be on the mound when the cabbies clash with the Bloomfield Civics at Dean Field Thursday evening. The Parmelee club will have a classy battery in Leheny and Jack Cummings, former New York Giant catcher.

The Homestead Grays meet Port Vue at McKeesport this evening. Mainly through the fine pitching of Sam Streeter, the Pittsburgh Crawfords defeated the Nashville club, 1-0, at Birmingham, Ala., yesterday. The Southerners garnered only two hits off the Crawford ace.

In City League tilts last night the Whitaker team defeated the Gillespies, 5 to 1, and the Book nine won over Dormont, 4 to 3.

CLINICAL SURVEY REVEALS STARTLING FACTS..!

RESEARGH undertaken by the Gillette Skin Clinic and a wide-spread survey among doctors and dermatologists conclusively proves that faulty shaving can cause or aggravate many skin troubles. The prevalence of disorders traced to shaving prompted the foundation of the Skin Clinic, headed by an eminent dermatologist.

This clinic, through its head, emphasizes the importance of shaving with a sharp blade. A sharp blade, reports the clinic, is positively non-irritating to normal skin. For this reason, Gillette uses particular care in making the "BLUE BLADE". By actual test, in competition with several other "makes" of blades, the "BLUE BLADE" proved from 23% to 42% sharper.

If you find shaving a task—if your skin is irritated or uncomfortable—we urge you to try "BLUE BLADES". Gillette Safety Razor Company, Boston, Mass.

MORE SAFETY MORE MILEAGE AT NO EXTRA COST!

ONE of the strange facts about the tire business is — the PRICE of all tires is about alike.

That being so, you might as well pick the best—in quality, in safety, in mileage.

What is the best in quality? The public says GOODYEAR—this tire is preferred by more people than any THREE other makes of tires combined.

What is the best in safety? Accurate tests on wet concrete show Goodyears will stop a car quicker than any other tire. The next best tire skidded 10% more—other tires skidded up to 77% more under exactly the same conditions. And if you want safety from blow-outs—remember that Goodyears give safety in every ply, because every ply is built with Supertwist cord and every ply runs from bead to bead.

What is the best in mileage? Bus fleet records show Goodyear Tires give 97% more mileage than they gave five years ago.

Now that all prices are headed UP — it's more important than ever to get the most for your money. Better look over your tires and buy new Goodyears now while prices are still low.

By PRIMO CARNERA, Heavyweight Boxing Champion

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Oh, boy—oh, boy—oh, boy!" I hardly remember it, but friends say those were the words I kept shouting when I returned to my dressing room after that championship K. O. on June 29. Never can I be happier than I was then. After almost five years of steady, hard effort—some cheers, and many, many boos—this Ambling Alp finally finds himself on top (as Americans say) of the world.

Primo Carnera

Max Baer, the American, certainly is the chief challenger. He knocked out Former Champion Max Schmeling early in June and many seem to think he can kayo Carnera also. Eh bien, that will be decided later—this September, I earnestly hope, although the time and details of that match are up to my managers, Messrs. Louis Soresi and Bill Duffy.

Alas, with all this joy and glory I know I am "broke," that condition which the law calls bankrupt! I have a fine villa for my parents in Italy, plenty clothes (and lots of big shoes, of course), but—outside those things—Primo actually is penniless. In fact, he is in debt, I say to myself often with a shock that drives away smiles. So I must keep on working—and that means boxing, to be sure.

SEES MAX BAER WIN

I was close up to the ring when Baer stopped the German in the tenth round with right-hand smashes to the head. He had used such shots in the first and second rounds to stagger his opponent.

Then he seemed to coast for several rounds until he sent Schmeling reeling again near the end of the ninth with those same hard overhand rights. I think he prepared the German for such rather wild clouts by outmauling him in close. He handled Schmeling about the same way I did Sharkey, spinning him about with apparent ease. Can you picture American Max doing that to the Man Mountain? Perhaps, you can. If so, it will add to the interest in our coming fight.

Baer is a little taller than Sharkey and far easier to hit. He may have a much better wallop. With all due modesty let me note that he must have, if he means to become champion within a year or two. And I doubt seriously that he can hit any harder than Sharkey did when he was fresh and strong in the early rounds of June 29. I wouldn't think of having my worst critics take some of those so-called "Sunday punches" that I stood up under in the title battle. But Baer may have more dynamite. He will need it, I am sure.

RESUMES TROUPING

Upon winning the championship, my heart was set on returning home as soon as possible to see my people and rest for a few weeks. Talk was heard of holding a first world fight title bout at Rome—with Schmeling, so rumor had it—but that idea was postponed because it was necessary for me to make some money at once. So, at Atlantic City, I went on exhibition—something I am used to for several years. In fact, I've gone through a gymnasium routine—sparring included—on many stages in Europe and America. Just now my managers are considering theater and motion picture propositions, but I do hope they put in plenty of boxing in their plans—and even that September bout with Baer if arrangements can be completed in time.

I have read and been told what happens to champions who do not fight more than once a year. Too bad that money conditions make it so that only a single heavyweight title fight is staged each year. Indeed, Monsieur See long ago pointed out to me that too much "rest" changes to "rust" and finally to "ruin" in the English language when it comes to fight champions. And I am so used to ring action—even easy battles keep me on edge. Yes, I like rests, but not the kind that helps to whip a champion.

TITULAR "HEADACHES"

Nature demands a letdown after the strenuous work I went through for the Sharkey bout, but a month may be enough. Several real fistic authorities—Benny Leonard, former lightweight king, among them—think I have yet to reach my best fighting form. They say that is a year away, and I hope this is true. However, I can hardly expect to be more fit to fight than I was on the night of June 29. And now I must equal that edge for title defenses. So, even on exhibition tours, most of my work must be of a training nature.

Already I am experiencing some of the things that new champions go through. The day after his gallant fight against me, Sharkey said he was not sorry to get rid of the "headaches" that go with the title. They tell me Dempsey made the same remark after losing the crown to Tunney at Philadelphia and Gentleman Gene, in turn, had more than his share of "headaches" before resigning the championship after two years. Luckily or unluckily, I was well used to "headaches" long before I won the title. Law suits, suspensions, deportation proceedings, bankruptcy—everything from a technical attempt to draft me into the French army to a coroner's inquest over the Schaaf tragedy—have hardened me to such "headaches." Of course, the most serious trouble is that "broke" situation. That also must give my handlers "headaches!"

REGARDS FUTURE

In addition, I hear predictions that "Primo will not be a popular champion" because he "is too big" and is "not an American." Talk is even heard of reviving the "superheavyweight" or "dreadnaught" class. Again I think of Monsieur See as a prophet. Many used to laugh when he told them, years ago, that if I ever got good enough to win the championship just such a situation would arise; that is, the public would consider me too big and too strong and too dangerous for other first-class fighters.

As a fighting man, I believe such ideas are ridiculous because, in some important ways, my great size is a severe handicap against agile and clever opponents. Although I have not had that experience, I know I can be knocked out and I am not immune from punishment. If I had not learned to box fairly well, Sharkey would have reduced me to a wreck inside of five rounds. So it is possible for 200-pounders to beat me.

Intelligent fans probably realize that.

Of course, people usually want the smaller fighter to win. If Primo lived among giants (like Monsieur See's book hero, Dr. Gulliver) I, too, would cheer the little fellow on. It is only human for the fans to want to see Carnera kayoed and that thought gives me no "headaches." When my time comes, Baer or some other rising heavyweight may do that trick. It will then be shown that mere size and strength do not make a boxer invincible. I hope, of course, that defeat will not come for a few years. It will cause a sensation when it does happen. And then some experts probably will say:

"I told you so . . . that overgrown freak never could fight!"

CHAMPION—AND 'BROKE'

My handlers tell me not to worry about popularity, but to act as I always have—with good nature and courtesy. They point out that Jess Willard, even Dempsey and Tunney, were not popular when they held the title; there were many who wanted to have them beaten. And so it must be with what one famous American critic calls—"The Tall Tower of Gorganzola." I cannot hope for much popularity until I lose—in gallant style, I hope. Therefore, popularity must be passed up for some time, I fear.

The need of money will compel me to defend the championship to the very limit. Almost two years ago, an accounting showed that my personal share of fight and exhibition earnings was short about $175,000. As a result of that audit and other agreements, Louis Soresi, formerly my New York banker, took charge of my fiscal affairs, succeeding Leon See. Surely those money troubles gave me severe "headaches," and they still do, for that matter. My personal share of the championship gate was about $8,000 and this must go to the bankruptcy receiver in New York.

I started my career with no money, without a job, and, oh, so hungry! After five years, I still have no money, but I have a great job and am not hungry in the stomach sense. Furthermore, I am not discouraged at all.

HAS CAPABLE STAFF

With my money affairs in the loyal and capable hands of Mr. Soresi, and with my fight future in charge of Bill Duffy—the American, who has done such wonders for me—I am confident of reaping a real champion's reward. Duffy has been directing my campaigns ever since it was announced I was coming to the United States, late in 1929. As a chief second for my fights, he is a marvel. His assistant, Walter (Good Time Charley) Friedman, was the first American to predict my championship possibilities, 'way back in 1929. Charley is also Mr. Duffy's Broadway-Paris-London agent, it would seem a sort of man-about-town everywhere.

My trainer for the title fight was Bill Defoe, formerly a great featherweight and now a skilled conditioner of boxers. Other able trainers also have helped prepare me for other important bouts—for examples, Manny Seaman, for the Schaaf contest, and Ray Arcel, for the second Maloney bout. Through the 1931 campaign, my former manager, M. See, was really my trainer, too.

With my five-year plan (1928-1933) to win the championship a success, I am seriously considering another five-year plan (1933-1938) in which to hold that title by defending it, even more than once or twice a year if suitable arrangements can be made. I will be 27 years old next October 25 and critics agree that a heavyweight should be at his best when 28 or 29. I was well over 21 when I started boxing and had none of my early youthful vitality beaten out of me. So I ought to be formidable for five years more, at least.

WOULD BOX OFTEN

At that, I must worry a bit because Max Baer seems to be the only contender now in sight. Should I defeat him as decisively as I did Sharkey, Primo again may have to retire and return to those circus exhibitions from which he sprang. I hope for a better fate, however.

Long's Sport Comment

In the Senatorial outfit that Joe Cronin is trying to bring home first in this year's American League race. They are Ossie Bluege, Goose Goslin, Buddy Myer and Sam Rice.

THE REGULAR CATCHER for Griffith's pennant winners of eight years ago was Muddy Ruel. The pitchers were Walter Johnson, Stanley Coveleskie, Fred Marberry, Alex Ferguson, Tom Zachary, George Mogridge, Win Ballou, Allen Russell and others; Joe Judge was at first base, Stanley Harris at second, Bluege or Myer at third, Roger Peckinpaugh at shortstop, and Rice, Goslin and Joe Harris or Earl McNeely in the outfield.

All but four now have passed along. And of that quartet, only Bluege was and still is a full-time regular and has remained continuously with the Washington club. Rice does little playing nowadays, Goslin spent two and a half seasons with the Browns in the meantime, and Myer did not join the Senators until late in September of 1925 and was used only as a substitute for Bluege in three games of the world series against the Bucs.

LOOKING BACK OVER the recent British open, Harry Salsinger is led to remark that golf is one of the few sports in which you meet competitors who are more than 50 years old. Among the players in that tournament were Sandy Herd and Harry Vardon, two of the great names in golf. You may get an idea of Herd's age from the fact that he was playing in his forty-second British open. He will not see 60 again. He had rounds of 76-79. Vardon, at one time the best player in golf, was last in the field that tried to qualify at St. Andrews, and the best he could do was to shoot 87-88.

THE SCORE ITSELF does not mean so much, however. The point is that Vardon, who scored the first of his six victories in the British open way back in 1896, still is good enough at his advanced age to compete in the fastest group gathered in tournament competition in golf.

And then there is the new British amateur champion, the Hon. Michael Scott. He is 55, yet he defeated a great field of youthful stars to capture his first major title. It brings up the question as to in how many other sports a man of 55 has won an important championship in international competition.

THE OPINION IN foreign tennis circles that Mrs. Helen Wills Moody is beginning to slow down is not based solely on the fact that in winning the Wimbledon championship for the sixth year she lost a set for the first time since 1927.

The British experts, in reviewing the tournament, write of Mrs. Moody that she was not the Helen of old. She tried too hard, they say. She lacked the old sureness. She did not take the short steps into position as before. The belief is growing over there that Mrs. Moody can be defeated. But the fact remains that, as in the earlier years of her brilliant career, no one is doing it.

Maxie Rosenbloom

IF MAXIE ROSENBLOOM remains firm in his refusal to go through with the proposed light-heavyweight title fight against Mickey Walker on the ground that the New York promoters broke an agreement with him, Jimmy Johnston may take another tack and try to induce Rosenbloom to defend his crown against a different challenger, Tony Shucco, of Boston. As a matter of fact, Shucco asserts that Johnston promised him the match after Jimmy had seen Lou Brouillard give Walker a lacing in Boston recently, but that Johnston shifted his plans in favor of Walker again when he returned to New York. Shucco has posted $2,500 with the New York Commission in support of his challenge to Rosenbloom. Tony already has defeated Maxie, but it was in an over-the-weight match, staged in Holyoke six months ago. Shucco also has defeated Jim Braddock, Arthur Huttick and Billy Jones, and in the semi-final to the Sharkey-Carnera fight he beat Al Stillman, of St. Louis, who holds a decision over Rosenbloom.

A two-year contract has been signed for the use of the field, and a retaining wall is being erected.

Petrolle Is Matched With Van Klaveren

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP.)—Tim Mara has signed Billy Petrolle and Bep Van Klaveren for a return 10-round welterweight bout in the Yankee Stadium, August 23.

The commission also approved a new date, August 9, for the 15-round title match between Lou Brouillard, of Worcester, Mass., and Ben Jeby, recognized in this state as middleweight champion. Mara will hold this attraction in the Polo Grounds. Originally it was to have been staged July 26, but Jeby suffered an injured ankle and asked a postponement.

GRAPHIC GOLF

GRIPPING THE CLUB

Gripping the club is entirely a matter of individual preference, and, as tension is to be avoided in golf, the one that comes most naturally and feels most comfortable no doubt will work out best. But, once decided upon, it should be carefully adhered to until it becomes more or less mechanical.

A dependable grip is necessary for success in golf. Generally speaking the shaft should be held not in the palms, but in the fingers. This allows better wrist action, which adds yards to the shot. It also allows more relaxed muscles, and, although the girp should be firm enough so that the clubhead will not turn in the hands, a tendency to tightness should be avoided. With a clenched grip the backswing is unconsciously quickened, which, in turn, is very apt to take the eyes away from the ball.

Between Rounds

Luke Carney is planning a trip to the Coast with Eddie and Fritzie Zivic within the next few months, having been assured a number of bouts out there.

Bert Sheets, Beaver County flyweight champion, will turn professional here shortly.

Jess Willard, former heavyweight champion, and the biggest man to hold the title until Primo Carnera came along, believes Primo will beat Max Baer when they meet. Too bad Willard and Carnera could not tangle in their prime.

Semi-Finals Today In Park Doubles

Semi-finals are being played today in the Olympia Park men's doubles tennis tournament. Dick Creighton and Milton King, of Duquesne University, meet John Campbell and the Rev. Robert Swain, and Dick Dalzell and Jack Tunney oppose Joe Creighton and Milton Deithorn. Results to date:

Joe Creighton and Milton Deithorn defeated Forest Campbell and Bill Murphy, 6-3, 6-2; Milton King and Dick Creighton defeated Joe O'Neill and Leo O'Neill 6-1, 6-4; Dick Dalzell and Jack Tunney defeated Hugh Donnelly and Hugh Jennings, 6-1, 6-2; John Campbell and Rev. Robert Swain defeated Harold Campbell and Thompson Lindsay, 7-5, 6-4.

Forbes

The Dictators: Don't Overdo Fascism Now

By B. C. FORBES

RECOVERY in trade, employment, investments is going on throughout almost the whole world.

Washington should note that.

Mr. Forbes

Our newly-spawned dictators seem to imagine that continued improvement depends upon feverishly hasty, revolutionary actions by them. Will they please pause to reflect that things have been moving in the right direction in other countries not dictator-ridden?

Extraordinary, abnormal, artificial stimulation may have been necessary to expedite economic recovery here; but the pace has already become so fast that additional avoidable stimulants should be withheld.

SOME ATTRIBUTE the lifting of the depression entirely to political tactics.

My humble opinion is that the depression had about spent itself before dictators appeared on the scene, spent itself not only in this country but in various other lands.

Let us accord all praise to Franklin Roosevelt for his swift, dynamic, effective action the moment he entered the White House. Let us recognze unqualifiedly that he wrought miracles in transforming the psychology of the American people from gloominess to hopefulness, from pessimism to optimism.

Now, however, conditions have so drastically changed that the President and his advisers and dictators should seriously ponder whether the time has not come for them to reduce greatly the amount of oxygen they have been pumping into the economic patient.

THE RECOVERY, as I see it, is by no means wholly political-blown, by no means wholly artificial, by no means wholly superficial.

UNQUESTIONABLY, uncertainty over the future value of the dollar, uncertainty as to whether the gold value of the dollar will be drastically reduced, has incited a considerable amount of purely speculative buying of stocks and second-grade bonds, agricultural commodities, raw materials, etc.

Unquestionably, too, some manufacturers have been increasing their stocks of finished goods before "codes" raising wages and curtailing work hours could take effect. Unquestionably, also, not a few consumers have been covering their needs for some time ahead, in anticipation of advancing retail prices.

After allowing for all this, there is very substantial evidence that much of the expansion in activity has been genuine, much of it based on relaxing of long-exercised self-denial, much of it due to the satisfying of actual needs.

This view is strengthened by what has happened in most other countries where revalutionary measures have not been instituted by government.

HASTENING wage anvances, if not overdone, is sound policy. So is the spreading of employment by fixing maximum working hours.

Banning of trade evils injurious to the earning of profits sufficient to make possible the payment of decent wages and return on capital is laudable.

Providing employment by reasonable public construction, etc., is timely.

But in view of the extent of the rebound in wheat, cotton and other basic commodities, the tremendous "porcessing taxes" on food and clothing raw materials take the form of a gigantic experiment of dubious wisdom.

Vast payments, from taxpayers' pockets, for limiting or destroying farm production, also are of dubious prudence.

Still more dubious would be precipitate and drastic debasing of the dollar by cutting its gold content.

IN SHORT, is there imperative need for rushing farther along the road to un-American Fascism at this juncture?

Why not give things a chance to work out without further revolutionary dictation at this time?

BOOMS CAN be pushed too far too fast.

PROFIT-TAKING MEETS STOCK UPRUSH

NEW YORK, July 18.—Financial markets roared up the ascending price trail today, but were forced to hurdle huge profit-taking barriers as they reached the highest levels for the past two years or more.

Stock trading, during the early hours, was at about the fastest pace of the recent upswing, and blocks of 5,000 to 30,000 shares of several of the favorites changed hands shortly after the opening. Gains of 1 to 4 or more points, however, were shaded substantially around noon, and some of the alcohols even showed losses of 8 points before supporting orders enabled them to climb back.

With many of the more buoyant stocks turning irregular, the rails were taken up for advances of 1 to 3 or more. Cotton was firm, but wheat, corn and rye were a trifle nervous after initial gains of 2 or more cents a bushel. Barley soared 17 cents a bushel at one time. The dollar dropped to a new low in foreign exchange markets. Bonds were fairly firm.

The best advances in rail shares were registered by Union Pacific, Delaware and Hudson, Southern Pacific, Lackawanna and New York Central. Canady Dry, Standard Brands and Crown Cork were heavy traded for gains of 1 to as much as 5. Du Pont, United States Steel, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Libbey-Owens, Hershey, Alaska Juneau, McIntyre Porcupine, Dome, Western Union and United States Rubber were up 1 to 2 or more. Homestake Mining ran up around 10 points. There were a number of declines of fractions to around a point.

With the voters of Arkansas and Alabama registering their sentiments on prohibition repeal, followers of the recently buoyant alcohol stocks exhibited signs of caution by cashing in part of their extremely large gains. While 16 states have voted for repeal up to today, 36 are necessary to amend the Constitution. Tennessee will ballot on the question Thursday and Oregon Friday.

On the basis of "repeal" sentiment carrying most of the states, the so-called "repeal" issues have been the most spectacular gainers of the 1933 bull market. National Distillers, down to 16⅞ this spring, got up around 125; American Commercial Alcohol, low at 13, spurted to about 90; United States Industrial Alcohol jumped from 13½ to 94, and various allied stocks have registered advances of several hundred percent since March.

WHEAT DOWN, BARLEY UP

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP.)—A big shock to friends of higher prices came today from reports that Argentina was offering to ship wheat to New York and undersell domestic grain.

Despite assertions that the United States government would likely intervene with measures to prevent wheat imports into this country, prices turned sharply downward from new record high quotations including sales of wheat as high as $1.28⅛ a bushel. Throughout the rest of the day wheat and other grains fluctuated wildly, with lowest levels reached in the late dealings.

Gyrations of the barley market over a range of 19 cents were associated in some quarters with prohibition repeal elections in Alabama and Arkansas, but appeared more nearly related to an accumulation of buying orders for barley in the hands of a single broker and to a simultaneous temporary dearth of offerings.

Wheat closed nervous, ¾@1½c under yesterday's finish, corn 1¼@2¼ down, oats ¼@⅞ off, rye and barley showing gains respectively of 1½@2⅜ and 7⅜@7¾c, and provisions unchanged to 15 cents higher.

DEBT PAYMENT MADE BY TINY SAN DOMINGO

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 18.—In these days when it is unfashionable for nations in Europe and Latin America to pay debts, particularly those owed to the American people, it is refreshing to learn that the tiny Dominican Republic has forwarded $450,000 thus far this year to take care of its debt service.

Mr. Rukeyser

To a degree the act of good faith reflects the policy of the 41-year-old president, Gen. Rafael L. Trujillo, who because of his efforts to improve the lot of the masses in his country, has been nicknamed "the Roosevelt of the Caribbean." With income cut in half last year, he nevertheless balanced the budget. The process involved turning out of office political hangers-on, and also reducing salaries of all public servants, including his own.

SIZE MEANINGLESS

When the roll call of those who honored existing contracts is called, nations will not line up according to size. Apparently there is no correlation between respect for agreements and territorial expanse.

While default and repudiation have been popular, another trend bucker, Cuba—under the Dictator Machado has, nevertheless, been keeping up interest and amortization payments—evidently not desiring to court intervention.

Meantime, Germany is in the curious position of living on her creditors through the standstill agreement and other devices, and yet nominally remaining on the gold standard and therefore looking askance at the United States, which has divorced itself from gold. This incident is just one more indication that the financial world is topsy turvy.

SEES STABILITY

One first rank business leader, who is optimistic about the longer term future in the United States, thinks that after recovery runs its course it will be possible to achieve a high degree of economic stability. He would remove the disturbing effect of excessive speculation by curbs on the stock exchange and the banks, and would offset foreign uncertainties by making the United States to a large degree economically self sufficient. Once our business is conducted in accordance with a national system of economics, he feels that it will be practicable to set up controls, and to direct our economic destiny along rational lines.

Obviously President Roosevelt has in mind going back to the 1924-25 price level, and then seeking an equilibrium. After that objective has been reached, he intends to seek to iron out the peaks and valleys in the business cycle. Referring to this policy, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, of Cleveland, recently remarked:

"This means that it is the policy of our government to have this present price advance the last one that we shall ever experience."

ECONOMIC ADVENTURE

Those who have read history and are familiar with the hanging rhythm and tempo of life will wonder. To the impartial observer, it is apparent that the administration, in the name of the people, is carrying on an enormous adventure. In the past, in this country, similar operations, though on a smaller scale, were usually conducted by private interests in pursuit of profit.

As a practical matter, stability will be a matter of degree. Absolute equilibrium is unthinkable. Even the intelligent advocates of stability have in mind a dynamic stability, which will allow for growth and for new inventions.

If the amplitude of the swings in the business cycle can be reduced, though not omitted, society will free itself from its most wasteful habit, and the means will be available greatly to raise the average standard of living.

DOLLAR TAKES NEW DROP

LONDON, July 18.—(AP.)—The American dollar developed fresh weakness today and gradually neared the old parity, closing at $4.88^3/_4$ to the pound, a net loss of $6^3/_4$ cents since yesterday's close.

After several days of quiet offerings came from many quarters and in the absence of support the rate depreciated steadily from the opening of $4.79^1/_2$.

Gold currencies moved irregularly and finished around yesterday's levels. The French franc gained a fraction despite control selling and closed at 85.15 to the pound. The mark closed at 13.98 and the guilder at $8.25^1/_2$.

PARIS, July 18 — (INS.)—The American dollar opened at 17.65 francs and closed at 17.62 on the Paris bourse today. The opening figure was the high point and the low mark was 17.50.

The British pound sterling opened at 85.06 francs and closed at 85.125. The florin closed at 1,031 francs.

'Frisco's Program Opposed by R. F. C.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(AP.)—The reconstruction corporation today joined with a group of banks and insurance companies in opposition to the plan for reorganization of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Company, which is presenting its proposal for revamping its capital structure to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

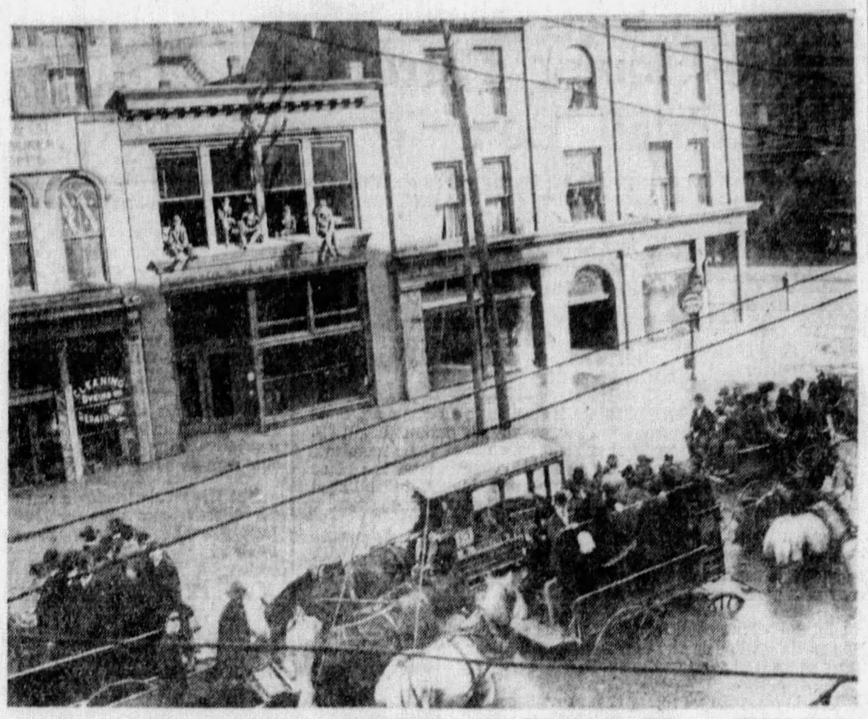
MEN—STEADY WORK

We will hire 8 men at once who live in Pittsburgh, train them thoroughly at our local branch at our expense, and employ them immediately in permanent positions, full time.

Married men preferred, as these positions are responsible and we require no investment or deposit—but you must be reputable, and able to learn this work as taught. This is steady profitable sales work, but our method of putting the prospect into the market for our invention is so unusual that you must be trained in it. While learning, new men must be satisfied on earnings of $35.00 to $45.00 per week, but later can increase this substantially. Previous experience not important because our method is so unusual, but applicants must be willing to work hard and study to qualify for the higher incomes. Apply tomorrow morning, 9 to 12, and 1 to 3, at 305 Investment Bldg., 239 Fourth ave.

PERMANENT position for solicitor of good appearance; splendid opportunity; no selling. 402 McCance bldg., 7th & Smithfield.

REMEMBER WHEN Federal Street Flowed?



TWO-WAY TRAFFIC ON FEDERAL STREET DURING THE FLOODS OF 1907 . . . . HORSE BUSES

Federal street in 1907, before it was raised in Pittsburgh's battle against river floods, under the waters of the overflowing Allegheny. The wagonloads of men were being hauled to the Sixth street bridge, over which they walked to board more carts to traverse the flooded Duquesne way section. This picture was lent by Harry L. Neff, 106 Federal street.

PREMIERE -:- Gripping Story of Life Behind The Scenes at Hollywood -:- By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER V.

"I think I like you because you do not look so respectable as the rest."

"I've tried all my life not to be respectable," he said easily. A golden warmth emanating from her body subtly started the blood singing in his veins.

"You are different," she informed him, her eyes steadily upon his face. "The others — they try so hard to act respectable . . . in public. They make a profession of it. But you—"

"And you—"

"I am not a human being," said Leni. "I am just fireworks. A skyrocket, perhaps. I have to keep burning myself up to keep going higher. There is nothing left—all is consumed. I will come down faster than I went up."

Cavanaugh patted her hand. "Nonsense! You're still feeling a little tragic."

While he talked and listened to her answers, Cavanaugh's mind was seeking an escape for Leni and himself from the stale-smelling slot between the two buildings. It was a place for ash cans and janitors and prowling cats.

A glistening princess in silver slippers was parading in a gutter. . .

"You stand right here a minute," he said excusing himself and walking ahead of her toward the cigaret smoker in the usher's uniform that lounged close to the side door.

RECOGNIZES THUG

Somewhere in the crowded theater there must be a comfortable spot of privacy which two people could visit for a half hour. Any usher, properly oiled, would know.

"Hello, Mr. Cavanaugh," said the uniformed man speaking in a voice like a rusty blade. His cigaret remained between his lips. "Nice evening, ain't it?"

Laughter sprang to Cavanaugh's eyes, exploded with a muffled sound in his throat. The ridiculous fact was that the man was not an usher at all, but a slit-mouthed hoodlum whose native ferocity was grotesquely wrapped up in candy-soldier epaulets and brass buttons . . . a gentleman who bore the richly-earned nickname of Slug.

To be discovered in the ridiculous livery of honest work, by a personage of Lucky Cavanaugh's prestige in the upper-underworld, brought a scorch of humiliation to the bluish cheek of the masquerader and left him feeling exactly as a tiger might feel if compelled to wear a pink ribbon around its neck.

After all, a man has his pride, even his name is Slug and he stands ready for murder on instant notice.

SUSPECTS ROBBERY

From out the turmoil of his embarrassment and humiliation sprang an unguarded sentence of absolute honesty.

"If the boys ever start kiddin' me about this monkey suit," he stated, "I'll never live it down till my dyin' day."

The vanity of it sent Cavanaugh into peals of laughter.

"I don't blame you," said Slug bitterly. "But times is hard and a guy has got to live. If I hadn't been flatter than a thin dime I'd a-died first!"

Not for an instant did Lucky Cavanaugh suspect Slug of being an usher. There was only one explanation and he stated it.

"I suppose you're here to soup up the joint."

Slug did not deny the opinion. "Well, you know how them things is," he remarked. "All the boys are doing the best they can these days."

Nobody knows much about the mystic relations of "the boys." Not even the boys themselves.

Certain men are born with that in their blood which sets them apart. Anybody else is an outsider. They are a secret race, comparatively few in number extending from coast to coast and speaking their own private language. Of few criminals can it be said that he is one of the boys. But most of the boys are criminals of one sort or another, though some are actors and pugilists and gamblers. They do not yell copper and they don't rat on one another.

FOLLOWED BY LENI

They are regrettable blots upon our civilization. Nevertheless, they are with us. Lucky Cavanaugh was not an outsider.

"If I was you," said Slug, "I'd wheel that dame out of the way."

"Don't worry—I'm not going to stumble into your play," said Cavanaugh, "but if you've cased the joint you probably know every mousehole in it. The girl is feeling faint and I want to get her out of the mob for a half hour. Some place private."

Slug thought a moment, his face impassive. Then he took a short piece of steel from under his jacket.

"Slip this in your pocket 'cause you'll have to jimmie a window, Mr. Cavanaugh. You go up the steps back of the balcony and keep going. They corkscrew at the top and you come out on the roof. There's a penthouse that belongs to the manager. He keeps it locked till after the show every night."

"Thanks," said Cavanaugh.

"Don't mention it," responded Slug. "I been in the same fix myself, lots of times."

It gave Cavanaugh a mood of sureness to feel the uncomplicated obedience of Leni to his guidance as they moved like shadows up the hidden stairway that twisted narrowly to the roof. No petty arguments, questions and objections from the bright gold creature. The kind of a woman to make a man feel taller than he really was. . .

They had passed the closed office where Karl Kruger sat in a leather chair fighting with his own erratic nerves, while the two silent burglars in the room next door looked at an illuminated watch dial in the darkness and counted the fateful minutes.

FORCES WINDOW

In the box downstairs, Douglas Gates was still dozing, unaware of Leni's absence.

From the silvered screen Leni Luneska distributed her voice and looks and personality among 4,000 cash customers. Up on the roof, Lucky Cavanaugh deftly broke the lock of a French window and stood aside for Leni to enter. His manner was that of a princely host.

The room was revealed in a soft yellow light as he found a button on the wall. Low modernistic furniture, a sleepy Buddha, celebrities photographed in silver frames.

Leni dropped into a chair, the shimmering cloak fell back from her white shoulders. Cavanaugh observed she was smiling.

"So what—now?" she said. "You have brought me up a lot of stairs, but are we any nearer heaven?"

"Give me a little more time and I'll see what I can do," said Cavanaugh lightly.

He kept his eyes fixed upon her unhappy face as he relaxed himself into a chair in front of her. It was difficult to sympathize with her troubles—first, because she seemed saturated with that peculiar shell of prosperity and self-confidence that encases the famously successful. Secondly, he was wondering how long it would be before they kissed.

TELLS HER STORY

The thought flashed across his mind—not as a bold speculation—but as a fact about to occur. It was a hunch—a definite message upon a mysterious telepathic wave length.

"I think," said Leni slowly, "that I am going to tell you something."

Cavanaugh waited for her to continue but she fell into an abstraction of silence. Her legs were crossed and she sat staring at the tip of her silver evening slipper. Light from the table lamp surrounded her blonde head like a sheen of yellow moonlight.

"Where did you come from?" she asked him suddenly.

"From Caliente this afternoon——"

"No, no! A million people might have come out of Caliente. But you—where did you come from to drop into my life this night—tonight of all nights? When I first saw you I was looking back over my left shoulder. You were just another man—meaning nothing. Even now I do not know your name—"

"Cavanaugh. Lucky, for a nickname."

"Cavanaugh the Lucky," repeated Leni, voicing it gravely. "It sounds like the title of some medieval king. It doesn't matter. You are you, whether you came from Caliente—or dropped out of the sky. If you really have any luck I shall need it all tonight. Perhaps that is why you were sent to me—to bring me luck."

"It's all yours," he assured her.

"That remains to be seen," she said, without looking at him. "I do not know why I am going to tell you—all this. All I know is that I must tell someone—that I've got to find help—some place—"

She spared herself nothing. It was as impersonal as though she had been telling the story of another woman. Her life flowed past like a swift dark stream.

A factory in Vienna. Two hundred girls—children—making artificial flowers in a sunless room. Twelve hours a day. Black bread and watery lentil soup. Fingers stained with analine dyes. Shoes with paper in the soles. Starved minds, starved youth. The maddening roar of machinery in the lint-filled air.

Karl Kruger. Escape. Wine. Marriage. Beatings. Hatred. Theft. Flight. Arrest. Escape. Terror. Wine. Beatings. Hysteria. Starvation. Collapse of body and mind. Men. Berlin. Men. London. Kruger. Prison . . . America . . .

Out of the ashes rose the woman. Waitress. Salesgirl. Night school. Mannequin. English classes. Savings account. A stock company in Portland, Me. The long trip to Hollywood. Incredible ambition and iron-bound determination. Success. . . . Stardom . . .

Her voice broke, ended sharply . . .

Synopsis

Attending the premiere of her latest motion picture, beautiful Leni Luneska, the star, is confronted by a shabby man, who emerges from the crowd crying "Leni! It is I, Karl Kruger!" Leni turns white. Lucky Cavanaugh, a gambler, saunters into the theater. He prevents Kruger from making a scene. During the performance Douglas Gates, Leni's elderly escort, proposed to her. In the office next to where Kruger waits, thieves are robbing the safe. Leni leaves her box and goes to Kruger, whom she married in Vienna when 14 years old. He wants recognition as her husband. She is given time to think it over. Cavanaugh speaks to Leni and suggests that they go out for some air. She consents.

THE OLD-TIME MOTTO RETURNS

CROSS STITCH MOTTOES PATTERN NO. 491 PATTERN NO. 492

By LAURA WHEELER

The old-time cross-stitch motto is a heritage of the early nineteenth century that we can be most grateful for. With its quaint motifs, its dainty floral sprays and fitting quotations, it forms a decoration that is as harmonious in our homes today as it was in the household of a hundred years ago. Pattern No. 491 and Pattern No. 492 are companion mottoes; the design on each measures 9¼x12 inches. Each has the same quaint corner floral motif that can be carried out in a variety of colors, the variation being in the motto and the design that illustrates it. Price of each motto 10c (20c for both).

The Junior Patrol Mail Box

Junior Patrol clubs everywhere are finding a thousand things to do these days. Captains have organized clubs in a good many districts, too, but there are room for hundreds more.

And just as soon as a captain sends in the list of members in his club, his Patrol is REGISTERED here at Junior Patrol Headquarters.

The Captain gets one of the nifty black and orange real felt armbands, the badge of his office, right away. In bright letters, they say "CAPTAIN —JUNIOR PATROL."

Every Captain is entitled to an armband. Captains who have Patrols already organized will get one too if they send in a list of their members, the time their patrol club meets, and the place where it meets. Junior and Uncle Quin Hall need this information to register your club properly at headquarters.

Above all, don't forget that it's a Junior Patrol rule that every member of a Junior Patrol club must have a membership card and badge. Each member must have signed a pledge slip (or made a copy of a pledge slip) and send it in.

In Saturday's comic strip, Snuggins got scared at a house cat! He saw its shadow on the tent wall, and that cat looked a thousand times as big as it was to Snuggins.

You know, fellows, that's the way with a lot of things. Lots of people get scared of things that aren't really there at all. Or they let their fears magnify a little danger into a great big one.

One of the things we hope every member of the Junior Patrol will try to do is to keep brave and willing to learn what the real facts about things are.

But at the same time, we don't want to be foolishly brave. We know some fellows who think it's fun to dodge cars and trucks running through traffic. Be brave only when you are helping others is a pretty good rule.

There's a mighty nice letter in the Mail Box today. Have a look, fellows! It's from Harold Kerr, the captain of a patrol who lives at 718 Russellwood avenue, McKees Rocks.

"Dear Junior:

"I am sending in the names of members of my club. We are joining a series of clubs to be sports of our community. We feel that it is our duty to help others less fortunate than we. There are 10 pledges here for our members. Tell Junior I said hello! Tell him I hope he gets back in the comics soon. I get the Sun-Telegraph every day."

Junior is still in the country, but he may be back soon, Russell. Please write and tell us how you are helping others less fortunate than you are. That's real good news.

Hazel Miller, of 139 Blackhawk street, Swissvale, is starting a patrol in her district. In her letter today she says that she has eight members in her club, but since only five of them are signed up here at headquarters, she sends pledge slips for the other three.

That's the idea, Hazel. Let us know the news about your patrol as often as you can. Will you have the girl whose membership card was thrown out sign a new pledge and send it in, Hazel? That's the quickest way to get that fixed up.

More good news tomorrow, everybody. Don't forget, Captains, that the armbands are waiting for every Captain who sends in his club roll!

It has been suggested that all sessions of Congress be opened with music, as a means of increasing the appreciation of music throughout the nation.

But somehow or other we think closing each session with it would make music more popular.

It might be still more helpful to install an orchestra in the legislative halls when Congress was safe at home.

But the music would have to be chosen carefully — or it'd merely make Congress more popular.

Wesley Yates was taken before Judge Pahlow on Thursday. He was sentenced to six months in jail, with the understanding that he was to be paroled in thirty days. When Wesley had been sentenced, he asked Sheriff Bassett if he couldn't go down home and get his jail clothes. With the government trying to limit profits of corporations, J. Updyke Doakes is hop-skipping to Washington to whisper a timely suggestion into the President's left ear. "There are," says Updyke, with a knowing leer, "3,000,000 unemployed ex-vice presidents of defunct corporations available for conscription. Each and every one of them stands ready and willing to occupy desk space and accept a modest salary in an effort to limit profits of corporations. These men are now cluttering up golf courses throughout the nation, when they might just as well be occupying swivel chairs and making chains out of paper clips."

Tips For Yachtsmen

Before you get an ache for deep sea cruising we want to warn you that anything under 50 feet is not a yacht. It's just a boat. And not always that.

An outboard motor will not get you anywhere socially. If your family tree is a pair of oars crossed over a clam shell that ain't so good. Don't try to crash a metropolitan yacht club with seaweed in your hair.

Knowing that J. P. Morgan started with a 20-footer before working his way into the upper marine brackets we figured we would buy a 10-footer with an outboard kicker.

We got one second-handed from Christy Walsh up at Lake Oskywowwow. Famous men like Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb have sailed in that craft. The way to start an outboard motor is to tie a rope around its neck and start pulling. That system will choke better men than outboard motors.

If you see-saw with the rope enough you should get an answer from the motor in about 15 minutes. It's almost like a long distance telephone call.

The motor answers with a cough. That's all. Just a cough. Work away and listen. Another cough. The whole idea is to get those coughs close together and make them chronic.

That means about two hours' work right out of the middle of your vacation. If you cough before the motor does, then you lose. You must start all over again.

It was just 15 years after we wrote about Ty Cobb stopping at a barbershop to have his spikes honed that we met Ty in Christy's outboard lake greyhound Ty hadn't spoke to us all that time. The motor wouldn't commence. Around midnight Ty and The Bug were each at an oar. At dawn Ty discovered he had been rowing around in a neat circle because The Bug had let his oar drift away and hadn't said a word about it.

That was in 1926. And we figure that Cobb will be speaking to us again in 1941.

Anybody who thinks that Cobb's exit from baseball was due to his dimming eye, his fading arm or his slowing legs, is foolish.

The cause is the blisters we allowed him to accumulate on his mitts during that historic row. If we ever get to Venice we will send Tyrus a postcard.

A Workmanlike Job

The City and County Should Take a Leaf From the Book of the Flood Commission.

The city and county, seeking federal aid to the amount of about $20,000,000 each for public improvements, might well take a lesson from the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh.

The Flood Commission's program, calling for an expenditure of $57,445,328, is the first complete Pennsylvania project to receive the consideration of the federal public works administration. It has achieved this distinction because it was prepared in a workmanlike manner, and presented by representatives of the commission who are familiar with the administration's requirements and were ready instantly to answer any questions that might come up.

The city and county would do well to place their programs also in the hands of competent agents who understand what Washington requires and how the projects should be presented to command attention.

It is important, above all else, that the city and county programs for which federal aid is sought shall be so co-ordinated that there shall be no suspicion of duplication, overlapping, or friction.

It has been promised that there will be no competition between the city and the county in their quest of federal grants for public works. Assurance has been given that one will not attempt to secure appropriations at the expense of the other.

What a sorry commentary on conditions it is that it should have been felt necessary to give such assurance! That there should be rivalry between the city and the county is absurd. To a large extent the same people are served by both governments. What benefits the city benefits the county, and vice versa.

The county authorities seek help from Washington for various bridge and highway projects. The city authorities desire aid for river front and street improvements.

That the best possible case may be presented to Washington it is desirable that the city and county authorities get together in the preparation of their programs, agreeing upon what is of the greatest importance, and upon what may, if necessary, be dropped.

A committee of citizens could be of great service in co-ordinating the programs.

The End of a Racket

President Roosevelt Abolishes the Spoils System in the Postoffice Department.

President Roosevelt, in bringing first, second and third class postmasters under closer Civil Service supervision, ends a long established tradition of subtle political racketeering.

By a stroke of the pen, he abolishes the doctrine that in public life the ruling theme in appointments must be "to the victors belong the spoils."

Such a custom was obviously inconsistent with the administration's insistence on greater efficiency and economy in government.

It is highly wasteful to make business appointments, such as postmasterships, mere political plums.

Not only did the old system bring wastrels into office, but it retarded ambition because of the fear that jobs would automatically be lost when there was a party upset.

In insisting that new appointees be selected from groups who have been rated by the Civil Service Commission after written examinations, Mr. Roosevelt contributes to an improvement in the standard of quality for public servants.

And yet realists will recognize that within the eligible lists there will still be leeway for the expression of political preferences and rewards.

Nevertheless, the true inner spirit of the President's new order will be violated unless efficiency and merit are insisted upon in such appointments.

Government is weakened by the racketeering spirit whenever appointments are made on any other basis.

In raising standards for public personnel, Mr. Roosevelt is following the fine traditions of another Democrat, Grover Cleveland.

The 40-Hour Steel Week

The New Code Reflects an Advance in the Standards of Labor for Pittsburgh's Chief Industry.

In keeping with the times, the code for the steel industry filed with the industrial recovery administration by a representative of the principal companies shows a marked advance in the standards of labor.

The code fixes a maximum of 40 hours of work a week. What a contrast that is to the attitude of the principal companies in Pittsburgh not so many years ago when the eight-hour day was urged! They threw up their hands in holy horror at the suggestion. There was a time—and that within the memory of men not yet old—when it was commonplace for steel workers to toil in the mills for 12 hours a day.

Pittsburgh's chief industry is progressing.

To Be Famous

Go To College.

Whether a college education is worth anything or not is a point on which there has been plenty of debate.

A good many businessmen and others will tell you, if you are young, that it is wasted money.

"Get a job in a shop or an office, as I did," they say, "and work up. There's always plenty of room at the top, etc."

This advice is often given when the businessman's son, who has gone to college, sends home his weekly letter for funds. Under the circumstances, you can hardly blame the businessman.

However, if figures don't lie, there is something in a college education after all.

"Who's Who in America" lists the names of most of the men and women in the country who have achieved eminence in various lines.

It is worth noting that of those listed, nearly 85 per cent are either college graduates or attended college.

Only 15 per cent "made the grade" without this training.

Of course, you can be healthy, wealthy and wise without being in "Who's Who."

A lot of Americans are.

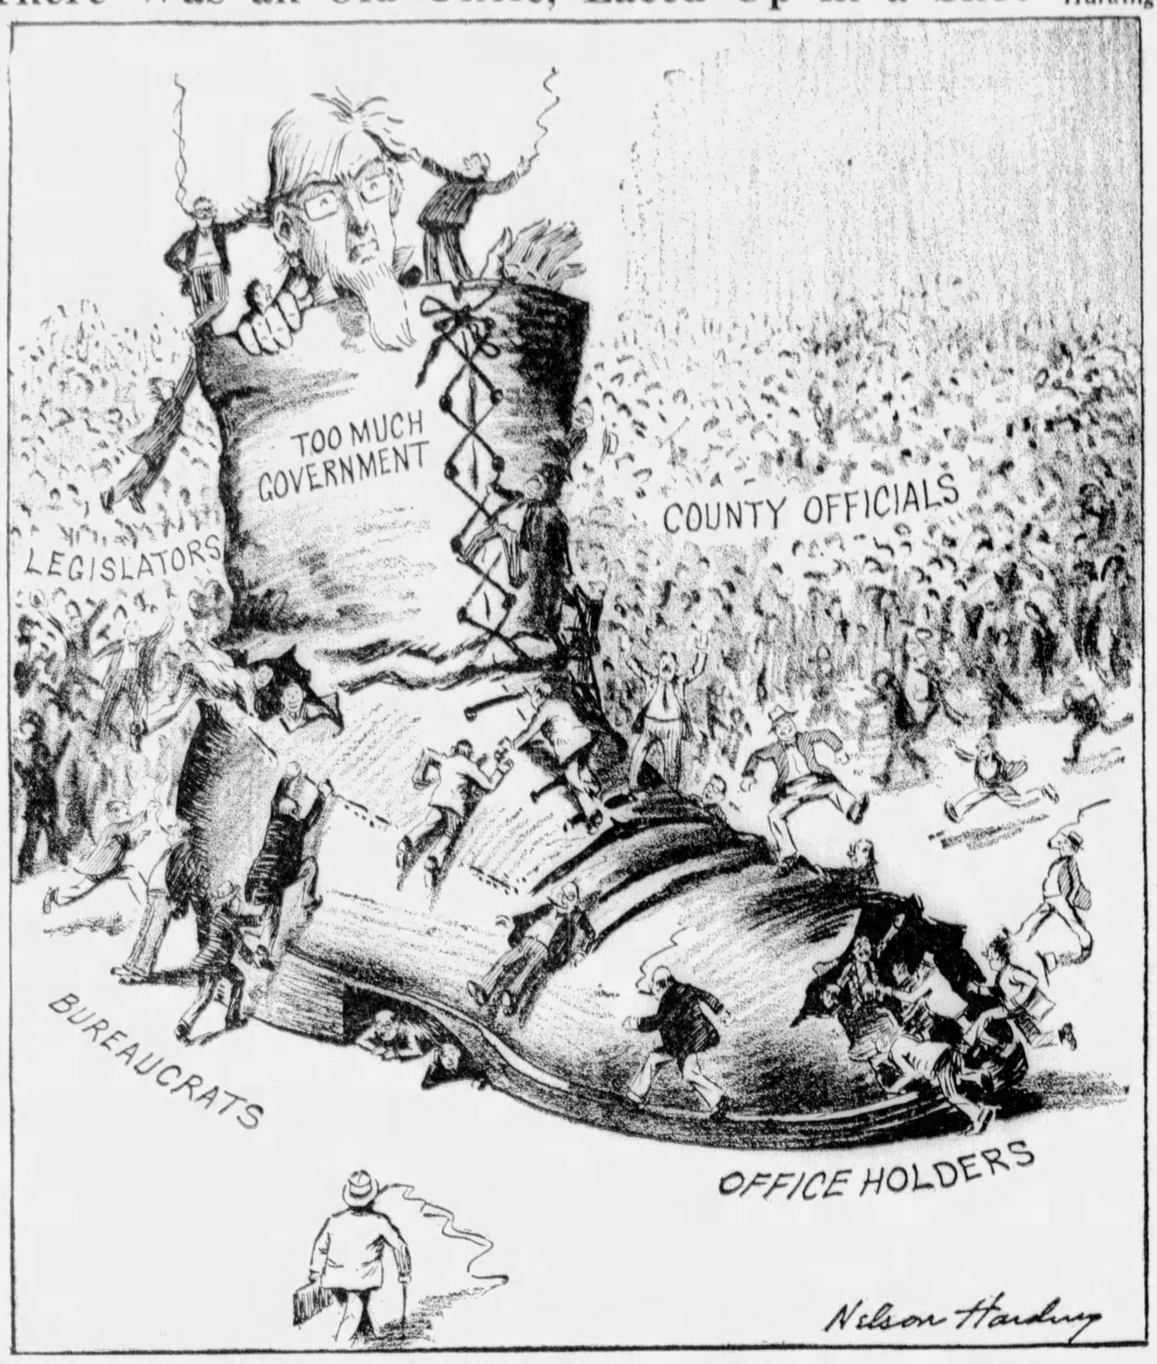
But broadly speaking, the more schooling you can get, the better.

If you can put in four years of your life in college, you will probably make less for a while than those who went to work directly from grammar or high school.

Later, you will probably make more.

There Was an Old Uncle, Laced Up in a Shoe

By Nelson Harding



This giant submitted to being laced tight
And squeezed in a shoe and complains of his plight,
While swarms of officials, all drawing good pay,
Are idling and getting in each other's way.

The giant who finds himself in such a jam
Is much over-governed and taxed Uncle Sam.
Just why should a giant so big and so strong
Put up with conditions like this very long?

Marry-Go-Round

Modern Marriage

If modern marriage needs any "improvements," it needs a little more adhesive tape, not more flexibility. A little more cement—not more back-gates, escape valves and emergency exits.

* * *

The average man selects a wife as a woman does a motor-car—not for durability or comfort, but just the most ornamental and expensive-looking thing he can afford.

Marrying your romantic ideal, at 16, doesn't always make for happiness—but neither does waiting until his pockets are well lined and the lining of his stomach is worn out.

* * *

If a man could see beyond the mascara on a girl's eyelashes, he ought to be able to know, just by looking at her, whether or not he would have to eat out of cans and live in a house furnished with bridge prizes and bargain-counter junk, if he married her.

* * *

When a woman sticks to her ideals and moral principles, in these days, she doesn't brag about it, she apologizes for it by explaining that she's "just old-fashioned."

* * *

When a young cynic tells you that love is the bunk and that marriage crabs a man's chances for success, ask him to name 10 famous woman-haters who have helped to make history.

We can get along without lots of things in this world and still feel that we have LIVED—but love and marriage are not among them.

* * *

No matter how much money a woman may be able to MAKE, she never can convince a man that she knows "how to handle it."

* * *

Men are so "logical" that, no matter how often a woman has made a failure of marriage, another one will always offer himself as a subject for her next experiment.

Isn't It So?

People are not at a loss when they give away happiness.

The usual outcome of a joy ride takes the joy out of the ride.

A man is as fat as he looks; a woman is as fat as she wants to look.

A woman is never at a loss for words; sometimes she is not at a gain either.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 18.—Demand for enormous mansions, duplex apartments and pent palaces of the twittering twenties has shrunk along with everything else in the depression. Toy houses, like those in Holland, are in high favor. A Long Island community of tiny homes is now being financed.

The art of interior decorating gives them a jewel-box sparkle. And the relief to a housewife's worries is pronounced. Domestically it's smart to be diminutive. The narrowest house in Manhattan is at 75½ Bedford street, in Greenwich Village. The lot is 9 feet wide and 34 feet long.

While the facade has been remodeled, the house was built a century ago. For several years it was the home of Edna St. Vincent Millay, and on its top floor Miss Millay and Deems Taylor wrote the first American opera, "The King's Henchman." The interior measures 8 feet across.

Michael Arlen is building a Lilliputian chateau on the fringe of Cannes. Noel Coward is negotiating for one of the smallest houses in London, near the old gateway in Chancery Lane, which will be done entirely in the period of the sixteenth century. And thus it thuses.

* * *

Max Baer's quick popularity as a fight idol is due largely to a romantic heart interest. He is a young man in love. And as such is a perfect set-up for idolatry. Handsome, smartly dressed and magnificently boyish, he has all the qualifications to bring fresh enthusiasm to a dying sport.

* * *

Baer is hardly an example, for he has accomplished much in boxing in a short while. But it has struck me the most attractive men are those handsome athletic figures who do anything well that is absolutely no value. I mean the best gentleman rider at a horse show or a dare-devil polo player.

* * *

The most engaging fellow I know is a cosmopolite who raises fancy Percherons in a European capital. He has sky-larked through several fortunes and expresses many other traits found so often among the notoriously worthless. Even his conversation is invariably inconsequential, but ever dazzling.

* * *

The most elaborate penthouse among the literati is graced by John P. Medbury in the Sutton Place section. It is three floors high with eight guest rooms, tennis and squash courts and a mosaic-lined swimming pool. Mr. Medbury is a syndicated humorist, scenario writer and talker on the screen. It was at a Medbury dinner a chorus girl guest said: "I loved your party. Everybody was so mental."

* * *

If Broadway expresses the resilience of many of its characters it may bound back. The most proficient of its up-and-downers is Earl Carroll. In my more than 20 years on the sidelines watching, he has zipped out of the picture like a light on four occasions. Each time the rebound carried him higher. When Carroll goes into seclusion to prepare for a new joust with theatricals no one sees him. He walks alone, clinging to hidden by-paths. Then suddenly there he is with a bankroll and new zest for battle—unsmiling, silken-voiced and utterly bland!

* * *

There's no place like the top of a Fifth avenue bus for a tired man to turn off his brain as a tap is turned off. Like a sleepy man in a movie, one may follow the human picture, grasping nothing of significance or continuity. Just conscious that all about things flutter and flicker. Last evening after gazing drowsily at the sidewalk flow my eyes fell upon a young girl in a seat in front, her chin cupped in hand pensively. Near the Museum a young man took a seat beside her. In a gesture of obvious pretense, he inquired: "Didn't I see you at the theater last night?" And so until talk fell to whispers. They finally went down the circular stairs to the sidewalk together. Not an elegant way for young folk to meet. But what can they do? Likely many happy marriages started off like that.

* * *

And the horsey fellow behind me—a ringer for Tod Sloane—who talked of his sickle-hocked mare. All the way to Washington Square I dozed, mumbling such lines as "Dickery dock sickle hock swippety swopperty six o'clock!" You get a thing like that started and it will be no time before you are blithering.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

The Important Club Leader is furious! The Influential Society Lady is horrified! Their militant noses are scarlet with rage; their expensive wattles, purple with humiliation.

And well they may be. For all the rest of the Bridge Setters, Country Clubbers and General Uplifters are tittering over their dilemma. Fine fools they made of themselves over the queer foreign woman! After all they did for her, look how she turned out!

Where did she come from, anyway? Nobody seemed to know. Somebody passed her on to Somebody Else. Somebody Else sent her out with letters of introduction to the Right People. Suddenly there she was, in the middle of the spotlight, speaking her pretty, broken English, rolling her tragic black eyes, spinning her desperate, romantic tale—and being protected and promoted all over the lot by the Club Leader and the Society Lady as their newest Exhibit A.

Didn't anyone warn them that her tale might not be true; that she might be just a scheming little adventuress? Yes, some of their friends tried, and their husbands protested—but they wouldn't listen. Instead they laughed scornfully. Nobody could fool them! They had too much experience—knew human nature too well. So they went on exploiting this Fascinating, Interesting Creature, letting her use their money, their friends, their homes.

Then suddenly the truth came out. She wasn't a Persecuted Genius, after all! She didn't have Noble Blood, and Ancestral Castles, and a Deep, Dark, Desperate Tragedy. She was just a cheap heartless little schemer out of Europe's back alleys, trying to climb on their silly, fat necks. And they wouldn't have been fooled for a second by her stupid lies if they had used their perfectly good brains.

Then why didn't they use them? Why did they let themselves be fooled?

They let themselves be fooled because—

THEY WANTED TO BE FOOLED.

They believed her story because they wanted to believe it. It satisfied their own hunger for drama. It made them feel strong and daring, and oh, so clever! to take part in such a tale. And how it did liven up their dull, middle-aged days!

So, of course, they believed her lies, and spent their money on her, and made fools of themselves generally. And now they're blaming her. They would! We humans always do.

FOR WE ALL LET OURSELVES BE TRICKED LIKE THAT, SOONER OR LATER.

Why? Why do we stand for obvious cheats and schemers? Why do we surround ourselves with fawning yes-men, who flatter us out of our gold fillings—and let ourselves be fooled by hypocrites and liars?

BECAUSE WE LIKE BEING FOOLED.

Something in our brain warns us that they may be tricksters, but we won't listen. We're having too good a time. Our greedy vanity drinks up all the flattery. Our bored brains quit their dull job of facing reality, and scamper away to take part in this exciting fairy-tale.

And meantime, what's happening? Usually plenty! Our regular chores are neglected. Our best friends are snubbed and forgotten. Decent strangers become involved. There's the deuce to pay! But we don't care. We won't stop; we're having fun.

Then it all comes out. And do we honestly admit that we have been off on an emotional jag, and have only ourselves to thank for the results? Indeed we don't. We're furious! Horrified that anyone could treat us so. Filled with self-pity at the "frightful ingratitude"—and ready to blame anyone but ourselves.

But whose fault is it, really?

The Divorce Mill at Reno Gets Busy Again—Mental Cruelty Is Chief Complaint—A Moral City, the Mayor Says

By EDWIN C. HILL

GRIST is coming to the mill in Reno once again. A year of famine has ended. Stylish women and well-dressed men parade the sunny streets, play the games of chance and in seclusion wait out their six weeks of exile. And then when the 42 days are up they spend five minutes telling it to the judge and depart for points east, north, south and west, with the bonds of matrimony severed according to the laws of the State of Nevada.

About eight thousand divorces have been granted in Reno in the two years since the six-weeks' residence law was enacted, and the law has two more years to run. However, business turned sour last year and up until the past month or so had fallen off so badly that the whole town was talking of going back to the three-months' residence law. Reno evidently couldn't believe that economic forces were at work even in its peculiar case, and the low ebb of February of this year, when only 131 outlanders filed suits, had the whole place in the dumps.

Now it's different. The wheel has turned. Never has the city had so many prominent temporary residents, and each train which pulls in delivers a new quota of six-weekers. A British lord has come to town to break the tie that binds, also a son of the President, John Jacob Astor's widow and the granddaughter of Mark Hanna.

* * *

Mental Cruelty Is Chief Complaint

A STATISTICIAN has figured out that the Reno divorce court shows the average married life of its plaintiffs to be about 11 years and six months. The longest marriage span which was snipped by a decree had endured for 42 years, and the shortest was one of three months.

Mental cruelty, a term which covers more than a multitude of sins of omission and commission, is the chief reason why husbands and wives cannot get together. Or, at least, that is what they say in the white stone courthouse of Washoe County as, calmly or tearfully, they explain to the judge why it is absolutely impossible for them to live any longer under the same roof with their mates.

Perhaps the wife had no interest in the husband's golf score, didn't care whether he shot a par or dropped a putt for an eagle. That's mental cruelty—and you find a record of it in the Reno files. Or maybe the husband was so little interested in the beautiful soprano voice of the lady of his choice that he left the room when she was wont to exercise it. That, too, is mental cruelty—and once again the records are there to prove it.

Reno, aside from the divorce colony, is pretty much like any other American city of 18,000 with its trim houses, their flower beds and their well-paved streets. A suburban colony, transplanted bag and baggage from New York, Illinois or North Carolina, out there in the flat valley near the California border, would look just as Reno does.

For years the city was the mecca of those seeking divorce. In fact, it had a corner on the market, with its three months' residence and its easy state law. But some of the neighboring states began to get envious as the trainloads, whizzed through their limits, only to unload their moneyed cargoes out in the Nevada sands. At the same time some enterprising legislatures in the northern states of the Mexican Republic out-Reneed Reno in a scramble for the business.

Gambling Legalized As Added Attraction

THUS it was that Reno, looking to her laurels, not only got the six weeks law but also legalized gambling and went back to the wide open days of the frontier. The first two years brought hundreds of thousands of dollars in fees to the counties and lawyers, and many hundreds of thousands to the hotels, apartment house owners, dude ranch owners, gigolos and everyone else who had something to sell or to rent.

Last winter came the drought. The streams of gold dried up, the dance halls were empty, the clubs deserted and the roulette wheels gathered rust.

Tonight, however, sounds of revelry come from the Comstock, the club which looks like a deep mine, which has a tunnel for an entrance and a main room with the appearance of having been carved from solid rock. Greenbacks have supplanted gold and silver in the play at keno, roulette, craps and birdcage. The Willows, swell and exclusive, is going full blast and the Truckee River flows down from beautiful Lake Tahoe and through the town.

Such is Reno for what one would call it. To some it is a city of sin; to me it is a piece of America—a compact travesty on our multiform marriage laws. To its mayor, the Hon. Ed. Roberts, it remains: "The most moral city in the United States."

SAME OLD STORY

By Winifred Black

He was writing about a quiet week-end in a quiet-country village—the other day—the Clever Man.

We all love to read what the Clever Man writes—it is so friendly always and so sort of cozy and "between you and me-ish"—and the other day, when he stopped telling the poor Outlanders in the wide open spaces about the new plays and the old concerts and the opening opera—and who was there and what they said to each other about the new tenor—and all the sparkling chit-chat of Broadway, the most over-played, over-emphasized, over-propaganded street in the world—some of us gave a little sigh of contentment and settled down to a pleasant 15 minutes of quiet contentment.

The icy ways of winter came first—the gradual fading of the confused clatter of the great city—the growing quiet—the peace of the white fields and finally the ice wine of clean wintry air in the deep New England countryside.

Sharp hillsides like great frosted cakes, black rivers with ice floating on the current—kindly friends—a roaring fire on the hearth—deep chairs—ah, that was the life.

But suddenly we began to read about teas at the country club—a dinner at the same place—luncheons—dinners—skating parties—organized sleigh rides—the same old story after all. No long evenings by the snapping fire—no close talk with old friends when all the world was shut out by the storm.

No songs—in the low raftered room—the same old froth and fever. Always something doing—some excitement, diversion, amusement—dear me—I wonder if the radio was going every minute, too.

Have we forgotten all about the real art of living—we nervous, restless, discontented Americans?

Can we never get it back again?—do you think?

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Unpaid

There are so many debts we never pay,
Unthinking, careless through the flying years;
Who can recall the hope of yesterday,
The bliss of laughter or the boon of tears;
The strength that was a staff where we might cling,
The face that was a torch to fire our souls...
Who goes through chance and change, remembering
The loves that lifted him to bygone goals?

There was one hour in the long ago;
It seems another self, another earth,
So far away, so great the debt I owe,
For which I tendered coin of little worth;
My tardy gratitude will never wane,
Though this debt, too, unpaid must still remain!
